WAR BULLETIN.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, July 22.

EXECUTIVE ORDER.

First—Ordered that military commanders within the States of Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, in an orderly manner seize and use any property, real or personal, which may be necessary or convenient for their several commands, for supplies, or for other military purposes; and that while property may be destroyed for proper military objects, none shall be destroyed in wantonness or malice.

Second—That military and naval Commanders shall employ as laborers, within and from said States, so many persons of African descent as can be advantageously used for military or naval purposes, giving them reasonable wages for their labor.

Third—That, as to both property, and persons of African descent, accounts shall be kept sufficiently accurate and in detail to show quantities and amounts, and from whom both property and such persons shall have come, as a basis upon which compensation can be made in proper cases; and the several Departments of this Government shall attend to and perform their appropriate parts toward the execution of these orders.

By order of the President.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

ANOTHER ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, July 22.

The following order from the President was yesterday embodied in a general order, from the office of the Adjutant-General, United States Army, and transmitted to the commanders of the different military departments:

Representations having been made to the President by the Ministers of various foreign Powers, in amity with the United States, that the subjects of such Powers have, during the present insurrection, been obliged or required by the military authorities to take an oath of general or qualified allegiance to this Government.

It is the duty of all aliens residing in the United States to submit to and obey the laws and respect the authority of the Government. For any proceeding or conduct inconsistent with this obligation, and subversive of that authority, they may rightfully be subjected to military restraints when this may be necessary, but they cannot be required to take an oath of allegiance to this Government, because it conflicts with the duty they owe to their own sovereigns. All such obligations heretofore taken are, therefore, remitted and annulled.

Military commanders will abstain from imposing similar obligations in future, and will in lieu thereof adopt such other restraints of the character indicated as they shall find necessary, convenient and effectual for the public safety.

It is further directed that whenever any order shall be made affecting the personal liberty of an alien, reports of the same, and of the causes thereof, shall be made to the War Department for the consideration of the Department of State.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, July 22.

ARRIVAL OF GEN. HALLECK.

Gen. HALLECK arrived to-night, accompanied by Gen. CULLUM and two other members of his Staff. He is waited upon to-night by many high officials, and is the centre of great interest. He is stopping at Willard's.

There are at least a dozen Generals now in Washington, including Maj.-Gen. BURNSIDE. They are not here on a mere visit of recreation.

THE ORDER REGARDING ALIENS.

The Executive order, declaring that aliens shall not be obliged by military authorities to take an oath of allegiance to this Government, was rendered necessary by the action of Gen. BUTLER at New-Orleans. The order of the President gives entire satisfaction to the foreign Ministers here.

BOUNTY TO SOLDIERS.

The subject of bounty to soldiers was to-day brought to the attention of Secretary STANTON. It is urged that unless some uniform system is established by the several States, enlistments will be retarded rather than encouraged. As it now stands, some men will enlist in the city or State offering the largest pecuniary inducements, whilst others will be dissatisfied and hold back. The Secretary having left the mode of recruiting volunteers entirely to the discretion of the State authorities, will probably take no action in the matter now, unless it be to advise that the several Governors confer together.

THE LAW RELATING TO STAMPS.

There appears to be very general non-apprehension with regard to the act authorizing payment in stamps, and to prohibit the circulation of notes of less denomination than $1, which was approved July 17th. Under the provisions of the act the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the Postmaster General, is directed to furnish postage and other stamps to the Assistant Treasurers, and such designated depositaries of the United States as the former may select, to be exchanged by them, on application, for United States notes; and from and after the 1st day of August next, such stamps shall be received in payment of all dues to the United States less than five dollars, and shall be received in exchange for United States Notes when presented in sums not less than five dollars to any Assistant-Treasurer, or designated depositary selected as aforesaid. Hence this law does not make postage stamps a legal tender, nor does it require Postmasters to receive them in exchange for United States Notes. It is expected that the Secretary will furnish postage stamps to be used as a circulating medium under the law, in such form that they cannot be attached to letters or other mailable matter. Such stamps will be exchanged by Postmasters for the regular postage stamps, besides being redeemable by Treasury Notes by Assistant Treasurers, and such designated Depositaries as the Secretary of the Treasury may select. No postage stamps can be exchanged at Post-offices, or redeemed by the Treasury Department, unless furnished through the agencies of that Department. Postage-stamps now sold by Postmasters are not exchangeable or redeemable by them, and if such stamps are gummed to pasteboard or other paper, which soils or renders them unfit to be used in the prepayment of postage, they will be rejected for postage, because when so soiled they cannot be distinguished from stamps which have already been used for postage.

The postage-stamp currency law does not take effect till the 1st of August. It is understood that the postage-stamps will in no case be redeemed by the Post-office Department or Treasury, if so changed or altered by pasting on other paper or otherwise as to render them unfit for postage uses. This is absolutely necessary, to prevent frauds. Already defaced postage-stamps are being bought up and passed at their nominal value, after having had the defacing extracted, and being pasted on paper to conceal the loss of the gum.

RELIEF ASSOCIATIONS.

The New-York and Pennsylvania relief associations met to-night. At the latter it was resolved to send to-morrow a large supply of goods of various descriptions in charge of competent agents, to be distributed among the sick and wounded in the Army of the Potomac. All the relief associations are laboring with commendable zeal to second the efforts of the Surgeon-General in providing for sick soldiers.

ARMY ORDERS.

Capt. THEODORE MILLER, Assistant Adjutant-General of Volunteers, is ordered to report for duty to Brigadier-General HARTSUFF.

Capt. MARCUS J. PARROTT, Assistant Adjutant-General of Volunteers, is ordered to report for duty to Major-General HUNTER.

Capt. LAWRENCE, Assistant Adjutant-General of Volunteers, is ordered to report for duty to Brigadier-General R. B. MITCHELL.

Capt. A. PIPER, of the Third Artillery, is ordered to report to Major.-Gen. POPE for duty in the Army of Virginia.

Brig.-Gen. B. S. ROBERTS has been ordered to report for duty to Major-Gen. POPE.

ARRIVAL OF CAPT. WHITING.

Capt. WHITING, of the Fifth Regular Cavalry, captured while in command of that regiment before Richmond, arrived here to-day, on parole. Several other officers have been similarly released during the past week, the rebel authorities offering but little obstacle to the exchange of individual officers of their army in our hands.

THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Commissioner BOUTWELL is busily employed in arranging for the organization of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The appointment of collectors and assessors will not be made before the first of September. A circular will probably be issued in a day or two detailing the plan of operations.

THE NEW UNITED STATES NOTES.

Workmen are now engaged in arranging the necessary machinery for printing the recently authorized United States notes. On inquiry, it is ascertained that those below the denomination of five dollars will be issued in three weeks.

THE NEW TARIFF ACT.

The Treasury Department is arranging the details for carrying the new Tariff act into operation. A general circular on the subject will be issued by the 1st of August.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

Arrangements are to be made by which the Overland Mail will be assorted upon the cars on the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad, thus preventing delay in the distribution at St. Joseph Post-office, or any point west of Chicago.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

It is understood that Capt. GIBSON has obtained leave of absence until further orders, to command a regiment of volunteer artillery from Pennsylvania; and that Major BURTON will relieve him in command of Fort Delaware.

Honor to the Dead in Boston.

BOSTON, Tuesday, July 22.

The remains of Col. WYMAN, of the Massachusetts Sixteenth, who fell in the battle before Richmond, lay in state this forenoon in the Doric Hall of the State House. The Corps of Cadets acted as guard of honor. Flags were at half-mast and crowds of citizens gathered to honor the heroic dead. The remains were escorted to Mount Auburn by the Second Regiment, State Militia, a long procession following, in which was Gov. ANDREW and Staff, several Masonic Lodges, officers of the army and navy, members of the City Government and citizens. The funeral services were conducted in the Cemetery Chapel, by Bishop EASTBURN. Col. WYMAN was 34 years old.

MURDER—THE SECESSION CITY COUNCIL.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, July 22.

A horrible murder was committed here this afternoon. A butcher named GEO. FREDERICK MENTZELL, killed his wife with a butcher knife, and then killed himself.

The City Council reassembled this afternoon. The second branch (Secessionists) rejected the resolution making an appropriation for volunteers. Considerable indignation was expressed by outsiders. It is thought they will recede from their action to-morrow, under the pressure of public opinion.

TORONTO, Tuesday, July 22.

The official statement of the Canadian Banks for the current month is just published, and shows $6,970,000 in gold, and $10,556,000 in circulation. The increase in gold is $7,000, and the decrease in circulation $36,000, as compared with the statement of the previous month. The banks now hold a greater proportion of gold, as compared with their circulation, than ever before.

Boiler Explosion at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, July 21.

There was a boiler explosion in Callowhill-street this morning, but fortunately no one was hurt, although there were many narrow escapes.

The boiler was located in a cellar, and passed upward through three stories and the roof of the building, and thence crossed the street, passing through the Market House and into the Melodeon building, where it dropped into the cellar.

Capture of National Cavalry in Mississippi.

CAIRO, Tuesday, July 22.

Fifty-three men of the Third Michigan Cavalry were captured by the rebels near Booneville, Miss., on Saturday. Skirmishes occurred almost daily in that vicinity.

NEWS FROM THE PENINSULA.

The Rebels Quiet on the James River.

Our Transports and Mail-Boats Not Interfered With.

How the Rebels Suffered in the Late Battles.

Gen. Burnside Gone to Washington.

OLD POINT, Monday, July 21, 1862.

The John Warner is in from Harrison's Landing, and reports all quiet up the river. The mail-boat is now regularly convoyed up and down the river as far as twenty miles below Harrison's Landing. The rebels either do not care to molest our mail-boat and others when under such protection, or they are not yet quite ready for commencing mischief. A sharp look-out is kept along both sides of the river, and feelers are constantly sent out by our gunboats in the shape of shells, but up to this time, there appears to be no symptoms of their attempting to effect any batteries.

The Vanderbilt came in last night and the Kennebec this morning, from Harrison's Landing, with Union prisoners just returned from Richmond on parole. The Arago also came in this morning from Port Royal.

The best proof I have yet heard of the terrible manner in which the rebels were cut up in the recent fight before Richmond, is the fate of PRYOR's Brigade. Capt. JOHN CULBERTSON, of Co. H, Ninth Pennsylvania Reserves, who was one of the wounded prisoners from Richmond on board the Louisiana, yesterday, says that while he was in Richmond it was officially published that PRYOR went into the fight of Friday with 1,500 men, and that his loss, out of that number was 860 killed and wounded, and 16 missing! If all other regiments made a similar show, and Mr. DAVIS would be willing to publish his losses as openly as we do, it might prove that his whistle on the last occasion was a rather dear one. NEMO.

FORTRESS MONROE, Monday, July 21.

Gen. BURNSIDE left for Washington this afternoon at 5 o'clock, in the steamboat Alice Price.

Five o'clock P. M.—The mail-boat has just arrived from Harrison's Landing, and reports all quiet on the river, and also at the seat of war. There is no news in that direction.

NEWS FROM RICHMOND.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, July 22.

The following is from the Richmond Examiner of July 19:

The following Federal Surgeons volunteered to remain to take care of their wounded, of whom at least a thousand remain in the Libby Prison:

F. Cook, Peck's Division; R. A. McNeil, 69th Pennsylvania; T. P. Seeley, 16th Michigan, and Marsh, 4th Pennsylvania; also, Drs. Collins, Prince, Hogan, Dunnling and C. M. Mills, 6th Pennsylvania Cavalry."

LETTER FROM THE ARMY.

Report of Deserters—Position of the Rebel Army—Preparations on the South Side of the James for the Defence of Richmond—Union Sentiment in the City, &c., &c.

SUNDAY, July 20, 1862.

Two deserters from the Fifth Virginia Cavalry came into camp yesterday. They were detailed to perform picket duty near White Oak Swamp, and at a favorable moment left their posts, escaped through the swamp, and approached our pickets under a flag of truce consisting of a white towel attached to a cedar limb.

From the deserters we learn that the main force of the rebel army is located on the bluff near Old Tavern, on Trent Hill, and on the opposite side of the Chickahominy, on Gaines' Hill.

They estimate the rebel force about Richmond, including the troops BEAUREGARD brought from the West, to number 190,000 men.

The rebels do not anticipate any demonstrations from us on this side of the James River, but are making preparations to resist any attack that may be made upon Petersburgh or Richmond from the south side of the river.

The military authorities are necessitated to post a strong guard throughout the City of Richmond, in order to subdue the Union sentiment, which is represented to be prevalent notwithstanding the efforts made by prominent Secessionists to discourage it by loudly proclaiming the late series of battles to be one of glorious victories for them, and declaring that the Confederacy will speedily realize the fond hopes and desires of its supporters.

It is extensively circulated through the rebel camp that our army has been reinforced by that of HALLECK's.

The deserters have parents living in Alexandria, Va., and expressed a desire to be immediately sent to that place.

From another source we are informed that the rebels marveled exceedingly at not finding more of our dead on the fields of battle, and persuaded themselves into the belief that we buried them during the engagements. It was positively asserted by one that we had buried in a single trench, near Malvern Hill, no less than 861 of our dead. A National officer, who was standing by, replied to the ridiculous statement of the rebel by calling his attention to the fact of our commanders being men of common sense, and that as such they would not be likely to desert the wounded, leaving them in the hands of the enemy, for the sake of removing the killed.

It is well known that all our killed and most of the severely wounded were left on the field of battle. Some of the enemy exhibited considerable disappointment at not finding our loss greater than it was, and even declared in the presence of Union soldiers—prisoners—that the rebel loss in killed alone was four to our one.

Our men taken prisoners are civilly treated by the North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama troops, but from the troops of other States they receive barbarous usage. While our surgeons were engaged in attending to the wounded, their instruments were stolen by rebel surgeons. An instance of this kind having been brought to the notice of a Georgia surgeon, he expressed much dissatisfaction at the conduct of his comrade, and reported him to the Commanding General.

Dr. CHAMBERLAIN, of the Fourth Michigan Regiment, who remained on the field of battle after our forces had withdrawn, for the purpose of attending to the Union wounded, returned to camp three days ago. On Friday he again went over to the rebel lines, for the purpose of recovering the body of Col. WOODBURY.

The transport Louisiana, under a flag of truce, came down from Turkey Island yesterday, with over a hundred of our wounded. She proceeded toward Fortress Monroe. WHIT.

THE RETREAT TO THE JAMES RIVER.

Important and Interesting Particulars of the Movement—Bravery of the Rebel Troops—Female Fighting—Col. Berdan's Services.

Extracts from a Private Letter.

HARRISON'S LANDING, Va., Saturday, July 12, 1862.

DEAR B: In order to understand what follows, let me premise a little. Our guns were placed in a line along the brow of a gentle inclination, and were about ten feet higher than the level space in front. Before the batteries on the right was a large field covered with grass and bushes, a foot or eighteen inches high. On the left was a corn-field, with the corn about as high as the bushes. It was about twenty hundred feet to the woods in front, and on the right the woods ran around nearer the guns a little.

The rebel army made two attacks, one from the right and one from the left; both were equally determined and fierce, but the one on the right was by far the shortest, but the most magnificent. After driving in our skirmishers on the right (Company E, from New-Hampshire Sharpshooters,) the rebels shelled us terribly. For an hour it was hell personified, but to one who has never been under fire of batteries, shooting these most infernal of all contrivances shells, it is an utter waste of time to attempt to convey a realizing sense of what the words "being shelled" means. All at once the bombarding ceased, and an ominous silence ensued. From experience we knew what was coming, and anxiously gazed at the woods to see from what point they would emerge. Every nerve was braced for the coming hand-to-hand deadly struggle. In a moment, as it were, the woods on the right were filled with a dense mass of human beings, and in another moment a long steady line advanced firmly and quickly into the open space. What daring! What madness! Infantry charging immense batteries at a distance of half a mile over a level plain raked by nearly forty cannon. Throwing aside all aid from their own cannon and cavalry, they desperately formed on an open plain, and pitted themselves against our infantry, cannon and cavalry. It was sublime—and forgetful of all else save their boundless courage and daring, I swung my hat and cheered till the tears ran from my eyes.

The moment they hove in sight, twelve Parrot guns and four large howitzers begun the dreadful work of death and destruction; covered with dust, whole companies, as it were, going down at every discharge, the cannon playing quicker and faster; still they closed up, and closed up, and closed up their shattered ranks, and advanced further and further into that awful arc of certain death; shot and shell, canister and grape, mowed them down, yet firmly as ever did the veterans of NAPOLEON they advanced, and faltered not. Already the remnant had reached so near that the loud, clear tones of the officers could be distinctly heard, and the batteries seemed doomed. Thousands were killed, but hundreds survived. The guns were doomed. I held my breath, when lo! right from under their faces in the long grass came a volley from our gallant men, who up to that time had lain concealed in a little ravine, or rather ditch. Flesh and blood could stand no more. They broke and fled, and our men lay down again while those terrible cannon hurled destruction into the fleeing mass. Three-fourths of that brigade were left on that field, and all I have related did not occupy more than ten minutes. It must be confessed that their discipline equals ours, if it is not superior, and braver men than their officers do not live. This talk about the rebels not fighting is played out. In fact, the whole North has been humbugged with stupendous falsehoods concerning the South. Why should they not fight as well as we? Are they not one and the same? This system of misrepresentation has gone far enough.

We were whipped at Gaines Mills, and our army a rabble. The cavalry appeared on our right and appeared anxious to charge on the bridge in our rear. They could have done it easily. Then the whole army would have been ruined, and the Southern Confederacy a fixed fact. It was the most critical moment of the battle or the war. A beaten army, a bridge and morass in the rear, a stampede, add to that a charge by 3,000 cavalry on the bridge, and any one may see the terrible result. To Col. BERDAN is due the most of the credit of saving the army. Rallying the men, forming a nucleus he began to inspire the men with the idea that all was not lost. Still they wavered. Officers and men were forced into the ranks, others, assured by the Colonel, assisted him in the terrible struggle not to win the day, but save the army. At length eleven lines were formed, and at this critical juncture the cavalry appeared on our right. They had not seen our rout, and supposed the lines were reinforcements. They were not decided and appeared to be calculating the chances. On their decision depended the fate of everything. Col. BERDAN seeing this, ordered an aid to ride to the rear and gallup up announcing that Richmond was taken. He did so, and the effect was magical. The men cheered, flags were waved, and the cavalry thinking our whole army was there, halted, and we were saved. When they afterwards learned from prisoners the real state of the case their mortification was excessive. Gen. MORELL thanked Col. BERDAN and gave him the credit of having saved the army, as he indeed had done.

It was the turning point. Generals in the front could not have seen it. Luckily Col. BERDAN was equal to the emergency. It is impossible to portray the effort required to stop the tide of 10,000 retreating men. You can only comprehend that it was done, the cavalry charge averted, the bridge kept and the army saved.

Tuesday night we slept on the battle-field. No meat had we seen—nothing but hard bread for five whole days. The night was as cold as the day was warm. We had no blankets nor overcoats, our clothes were ringing wet with perspiration, and now almost froze upon us. But soon came the same sad scenes of the Chickahominy, leaving our wounded comrades. At 2 A. M. we were aroused, and began our weary march to Harrison's Landing. As I left the field—I was one of the very last—the wounded had just begun to comprehend what was going on. "Are you going to leave us?" "Can't we hold the ground?" they asked. When answered that they were to be abandoned, they set up a most miserable cry. They wept, prayed, blasphemed, and besought us not to leave them. No one to even give their fevered bodies a drop of water; no one to care for them. I pass hastily over this scene, but I never shall forget the poor boys raising up a little, and gazing at us with eyes expressing only utter despair, as we filed slowly out of sight. (It is but justice to add to this that the rebels, as far as we know, treated our wounded as well as they could.)

But our sufferings were little less than theirs. A heavy rain set in, and continued two days. Slowly, wearily we struggled along. All was confusion. The Fifth New-York was the only regiment that I saw which attempted to keep up any organization. Every soldier was separated from his comrade, and each one was only intent on getting along as best he could. Colonels did not know where their men were. Men fell down in the mud, and, unable to rise, fell asleep. Cavalry slept in their saddles. When the artillery halted, the horses laid down and slept. Not a word was said. Through the rain and deep mud the army plodded along in silent sorrow and fatigue. Twelve long miles were thus at last passed. Yet, even in this misery, a little incident occurred worth relating. In the middle of the train were the Parrot guns. These guns were thirty-pounders, and were held in the highest esteem by our soldiers on account of their great powers of moral suasion. While toiling along in the mud, which grew deeper and deeper every moment, the twelve mules which were attached to the last one entirely gave out. It seemed as though the gun must be abandoned. There were no extra teams that could be used, but the soldiers swore that none of our guns should be left as a trophy for the rebels, and although nearly ready to die with hunger and fatigue, they took the picket rope of a battery, and, harnessing themselves to the carriage, brought the enormous gun in triumph to the camp, four miles distant.

The scene which this plain presented, at a later hour of the day, was terrible. The rain fell in torrents from the dark overhanging clouds upon a square mile of wet, hungry and exhausted soldiery. The mud was a foot deep in a very few minutes, but there was no escape, and night closed upon the most forlorn of all spectacles, an army hungry with eight days' starvation, tired with unparalleled marching and fighting, with no shelter from the drenching rain, sank down in the deep mud, so utterly dispirited and worn out, that even they slept.

Thursday morning, the 3d of July, brought no relief; we still got no food and none of us seemed to exhibit any energy; we did not wash our faces, although they had not been washed for three or four days; soldiers lay around like logs and their ghastly faces and spectral eyes caused them to look like an army of corpses. Not until Friday night did we get any meat, making nine days that we had marched and fought with only a little hard bread and less coffee.

Our confidence in McCLELLAN is unbounded. No one in the army has had his faith in our young General impaired. Retreat we must whenever DAVIS chose to precipitate his army upon us. That we were any of us saved is the result only of McCLELLAN's genius. That the country has now an army of the Potomac is owing entirely to the discipline of the men and the faith in their Captain. Every reviler of McCLELLAN is only aiding the South. There are only two sides to this matter, no neutral ground; any hesitating or qualifying is only so much treason.

It is idle to discuss the past, save to predicate action for the future. The whole can be easily summed up: we were outnumbered as we always have been, we stopped recruiting, DAVIS calculated immediately the strength of our army, passed the Conscription act, doubled his forces and drove us off, so here we are, but we have one consoling reflection, they could not drive us from a single field while the battle progressed. The war will be prolonged, foreign intervention rendered probable, and the debt increased, to all of which I only ask "why were we not reinforced in time?"

The loyal States should resort to drafting. It is not fair that a small portion of the available military strength of the Union should work while so many hang back. We give up business-life plans and throw ourselves into the vortex at the risk of life and health, and our neighbors get rich on the business we leave—enjoy the blessings of peace our lives have won. Are there not men at home who should to-day be in the front? Volunteers there may be in plenty—I think there are—and thus the great imperishable glory that grows brighter and brighter every succeeding year. But are there not some who should be forced to help? That is it in plain English—Forced to Help.

Yours, &c.

Postage Stamps.

In reply to a dispatch from Postmaster WAKEMAN, stating that the supply of stamps in the office in this City was running short, the following telegram has been received:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, July 22.

Postmaster, New-York City:

Restrict the sales of postage stamps to the former customary amount per diem, as this Department is not ready to furnish postage-stamps for currency.

A. N. ZEVELY,
Third Assistant Postmaster General.

The demand for stamps as currency has increased the sales at the office in this City from an average of $2,500 per diem to $20,000, a point which they reached on Monday.

THE TUSCARORA AT SOUTHAMPTON.

A Row Between Palmerston and Cobden.

General Continental and Commercial News.

The screw-steamer City of Washington, which left Liverpool on the 9th inst., arrived here yesterday. An abstract of her news has already been given by way of Cape Race—fuller details and our European letters will be found below.

The United States screw-corvette Tuscarora arrived at Southampton, from Cadiz, on the 7th inst. Nothing was known as to the object of her visit.

The Paris correspondent of the London Morning Herald says: "The Russian papers (according to the Opinion Nationale) echo a rumor, current here some time since, that France, in consequence of the stubbornness of England, had invited Russia to join her in an offer of mediation to the United States. Whatever may be the opinion in London, I have reason to believe that the Cabinet of the Tuileries entertains very serious intentions of interfering, to put an end to the purposeless and endless war in America."

The Daily News announces, on the strength of private telegrams received by the Africa, that "Gen. Scott would supersede Secretary Stanton, and that Banks and Pope would also enter the Cabinet. In making this announcement, the Daily News says there has been a suspicion that the designs of rival statesmen upon the Presidency have hitherto contributed to hamper the operations of Gen. McCLELLAN, and to deprive him of the increased force required at Richmond. The secession of Gen. SCOTT may therefore be regarded as of considerable importance, as indicating that military operations will be prosecuted with the utmost vigor, free from civilian interference."

As regards the new American tariff, the Times says: "The revised tariff reported to the House of Representatives, if it passes, will undoubtedly be in effect a prohibition of all European goods. It will bear especially hard against England, and is in some respects prohibitive. Every article hitherto imported from England and France will be doubled and trebled in price. The revenue of the Federal Government will not be largely increased, for the simple reason that the import trade from Europe in dry goods, cutlery, pottery, iron, &c., will be all but annihilated. The American public will pay the piper. The American manufacturers of inferior articles will enrich themselves at the expense of the general community. This anti-commercial project will enlist on the side of the South all the sympathies and interests of the two greatest nations in Europe. The antiquated and obstinate politicians who form the majority of Congress, and are first in the confidence of the President in attempting to coerce the South, and the friends of the South, may make an enemy of the West, and worse than all, they may ultimately lose both, and perhaps California and the Pacific States also."

The Morning Post regards the silence of the Federals respecting the battle at Charleston as confirmation of the Southern claim to victory.

After a silence of some duration, Mr. SPENCER, of Liverpool, again figures in the Times with his secession arguments against the subjection of the South.

In the House of Lords on the 7th inst., the Italian question was again raised by the Marquis of Normanby. He alleged that a large number of political offenders were confined in the Neapolitan prisons. No fewer than 16,000 persons were suffering every kind of wretchedness. Such a state of things entirely deprived the Italian Government of its popular pretensions. His Lordship moved for papers on the subject.

Earl RUSSELL rather effectively replied that Lord NORMANBY seemed too well informed to need any information for himself; and he would never succeed in persuading anybody else that the rule of the present King could be for a moment compared to the régime of his Bourbon predecessor.

In the course of the brief debate which followed, Earl RUSSELL announced that the recognition of Italy by Russia was not yet accomplished, but had been offered on certain terms, as also had that of Prussia.

In the House of Commons on the same evening, the question of fortifications was again discussed.

On the motion for going into Committee on the Fortification bill, Mr. LINDSAY moved the following amendment:

"That it is expedient to postpone the consideration of further expenditure upon the proposed fortifications authorized by the bill, until there have been laid before the House copies or extracts of the reports from the naval attaché to the Embassy in Paris, showing the state of the French Navy from time to time, at intervals not exceeding three months, during the years 1860 and 1861."

He contended that the Government had deceived both itself and the House with respect to the strength of the French Navy, and had induced the latter, by erroneous misrepresentations, to vote enormous sums for the army and the defence of the country. Notwithstanding this, he maintained that all this time the English Navy was stronger, whether in iron-plated or wooden steam vessels, than the navies of all the world, France included.

A lively discussion ensued as to the strength of the British and French navies, the speakers being Mr. COBDEN, Sir J. PAKINGTON and Lord PALMERSTON. The latter reiterated his arguments in favor of placing the country in a state of permanent defence remove a great stigma from their flag, and, as he believed, be most effective in suppressing this nefarious traffic.

The Earl of DERBY expressed his hearty approval of the objects of the treaty, but feared that unless a similar treaty was made with France it would be ineffectual.

Earl RUSSELL said that the French Government declined to enter into a treaty, but he believed would offer no obstacle to the exercise of its provisions.

The bill was read a second time. In the House of Commons, on the same evening, Lord PALMERSTON, in reply to Mr. MAGUIRE, said that the Government had received information from St. Petersburgh, to the effect that the Emperor had determined to recognize the Kingdom of Italy, and an Ambassador had been sent to Turin to announce that determination. He had no information as to whether Sir JAMES HUDSON had congratulated the King of Italy on this fact. There was also reason to believe that Prussia would recognise the Kingdom of Italy.

Mr. WEBB proposed, that in the opinion of the House Her Majesty's Ministers should direct the British authorities and commanders of Her Majesty's naval and military forces in China, to avoid any intervention beyond that absolutely necessary for the defence of those British subjects who abstained from all interference in the civil war now raging in that country.

A general debate resulted, during which, Ministers explained the steps they had taken, and contended that the Taepings were merely a lawless horde of land pirates. The resolution was finally rejected by a vote of 88 yeas to 197 nays.

Sir J. HAY moved that it was expedient that the Kertch and Yenikale prize money should be immediately paid. He contended that the forces who took those places had their claims most honorably admitted by the Admiralty, but most disgracefully repudiated by the Treasury.

After a very warm and excited discussion, in which the conduct of the Government was defended by Lord PALMERSTON, Lord C. PAGET and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and condemned by Mr. HENLEY, Admiral WALCOT, Col. NORTH and Mr. WHITESIDE, the motion was carried, (the Government declining to risk a division,) amidst enthusiastic cheers from the opposition benches.

Gen. PEEL had arrived in England.

The strike at Chatham Dockyard among the iron ship builders continued. The authorities had determined that on no account should the "turn-outs" be again employed, and new hands were being freely procured, notwithstanding the efforts of the Trades-Unions.

Prince NAPOLEON had quitted England for France.

The Tuam Herald states that a letter from a distinguished member of the House of Commons announces that the renewal of the Galway subsidy may be considered certain. The Galway Express also has information that the question is likely to be speedily and satisfactorily settled.

The great rifle contest at Wimbledon was still progressing. The match between ten members of the House of Lords versus a like number of the House of Commons, resulted in the victory of the former by 411 points against 349.

The Viceroy of Egypt had been on a visit to Liverpool and had been most cordially received. From Liverpool he proceeded to Manchester.

The semi-official article in the Constitutionnel, repudiating political objects in Mexico, and declaring that France now seeks only redress for injury to private interests, is received with applause by the rest of the Paris journals; but it is represented that the honor of the French flag will probably render it necessary to occupy the Capital.

The Globe's Paris correspondent confirms the report that the premonitory symptoms of backing out from the Mexican affair have come to a head.

The Constitutionnel intimates that the glory of French arms once vindicated, and money matters settled, proceedings will terminate.

Duke PASQUIER died in Paris on the 5th inst., at the venerable age of 96 years.

The cotton manufacturers of Rouen had sent a deputation to the Emperor, to represent to him, that from the excessively high price of the raw material, and the falling off in the demand for cotton goods, they must before long close their mills, and that some amongst them will have to suspend payment. Similar representations had been made from Lille, where many of the manufacturers are represented to be in a critical state, while to prevent one mill closing which employs a great number of people, the Government has assisted it with a loan.

The accounts of the progress of the harvest in France are generally satisfactory.

It is stated that at a Ministerial Council, it was decided that the general elections should not take place until next year.

The Paris Bourse was heavy and declining. Rentes on the 6th closed at 8.30.

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies, Signor CURZIO again asked the Government whether there was any foundation for the rumor that Italy would take part in the Mexican expedition. In reply, both Signor RATTAZZI and the Minister for Foreign Affairs renewed in the most positive manner, their former declaration that no foreign Power had ever taken any steps to engage the Italian Government to take part in the expedition, and that it had never formed the subject of discussion in the Government Councils. Both Ministers said, finally, that the rumors spread on the subject were entirely without foundation.

Col. BIXIO questioned the Government relative to the force of marines, of which he moved that a Parliamentary inquiry should be made. An animated discussion ensued, terminating in the rejection of the motion, as being equivalent to a vote of want of confidence in the Ministry.

The French and Pontifical troops at Rome had been consigned to their barracks on account of a popular demonstration in favor of the unity of Italy being expected.

It was rumored at Paris that M. de Lavalette complains that General de Montebello thwarts him quite as much as General Goyon did.

Cardinal Wiseman and Dr. Cullen, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, have, it is said, promised the Pope to recruit for him an army of 4,000 men in the British Islands, and, moreover, to get British Catholics to supply funds to pay them.

M. MON had resigned the Presidency of the Spanish Chamber of Deputies, and it was rumored that Gen. SERRANO would be appointed to succeed him.

The Nationalities of Turin announces that the marriage of the King of Portugal with the Princess PIA of Italy will take place at the end of September, and that the King will go to Turin.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE had received the clergy and the authorities of Warsaw, and, in reply to an address, said he did not attribute the late attempt upon his life to the inhabitants. Even were this the case, he added, it could, nevertheless, occasion no change in the execution of the programme already determined upon. The Grand Duke shook hands with Count ZAMOYSKI, and requested his assistance in carrying out the intended reforms.

The protest of the Consuls of England, France, Russia and Prussia, against the late bombardment of Belgrade, is published.

It is stated that Austria, France, England and Prussia regard the right of military occupation in Servia by the Porte, as in accordance with the stipulations of the treaty of Paris, and as regulating also the future relations between the Porte and Servia.

The Globe's Paris correspondent says it is rumored at Vienna that Russia is desirous that the citadel of Belgrade should be dismantled in consequence of the bombardment, and that the Montenegrins should have a harbor at Antivari. This is a point on the coast that Italy wants to operate on in the rear of the quadrilateral, Russia being her accomplice in the project, with ulterior views of her own.

The grain harvest in Egypt this year promises to be very abundant. The growth of cotton is likewise expected to be large, the rising of the Nile, which usually commences about the 18th of June, having on this occasion commenced on the 5th.

AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

Fourth of July in London—How the War Looks in Europe—The Logic of Extermination—The Feeling in England—The Cotton Famine—Proposed Remedies—Free and Slave Labor—Proposal to Tax Slave-Grown Cotton—What Will Be Done?—European Interests and Sympathies.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Tuesday, July 8, 1862.

The glorious Fourth of July has been passed by the Americans in London, loyal and disloyal, in a state of suspense, which, to many, is little less than agonizing. There was no formal, public celebration of the birth of the great nation, now struggling for life. A few of the more enthusiastic and hopeful did meet at the Crystal Palace, and toasts and speeches were made, appropriate to the occasion, or expressive of the feelings with which Americans in a distant, and now more than ever hostile country, must look upon what they feel to be a great, if not a desperate struggle for national life.

The news which has reached us since has in it little of hope. Cool as the season is here, we know what our poor fellows must be suffering in Virginia, and all the way to New-Orleans. We know that disease must destroy more than shot or shell, and that the epitaph of thousands will be, "died for the Union."

With the meagre news comes the cry for reinforcements. A hundred thousand men are wanted, we are told, in Virginia. There is no doubt that many times that number are ready to respond to the call; but what is the efficiency of these raw recruits? Months ago, this needed reserve should have been thought of. But if the Confederates concentrate their forces, why do not our commanders do the same? Sending Gen. MCCLELLAN with 80,000 men "on to Richmond," to meet twice that number of Confederates, and his army dwindling away by sickness, desertions and losses in battles and skirmishes, as we know every such army must, may be magnificent, but it is not war. From first to last, from the call of the President for seventy-five thousand men down to the present hour, this war has been underrated in its principles, its necessities, and its results. The struggle, to all appearance, grows more and more desperate, in the feeling with which it is carried on. Mutual hate, growing in intensity, must lead to the destruction, and may lead to the extermination, of the party that refuses submission. Gen. BUTLER, who hangs a man for pulling down the American flag, has come to believe in, and practice in, Gov. ANDREW'S doctrine, of the "solemn extinction of traitors." The logic is simple and unanswerable. Everywhere death is the penalty of unsuccessful treason. Every nation which has had the power to put down a rebellion, has exterminated those who would not submit to its authority. The integrity of the Union requires that a majority of the people of every State shall be loyal to the Constitution. The force required to compel this loyalty, or, at any rate, the practical loyalty of submission, must be in proportion to the strength and persistence of the rebellion. It is this strength and persistence which has not been properly estimated. The 75,000 men first called for was believed to be an overwhelming force. The 700,000 men since raised is found to be insufficient. It may require a million.

While the patriotic loyalty of Americans, at home and abroad, is becoming intensified, the feeling in England becomes every day more bitter, more unanimous, and more insulting. It may not be agreeable to you, but it seems to me right that you should know, that the feeling in favor of intervention spreads among the body of the English people. Those who said a month ago, "We cannot interfere," say now, "Somebody ought to interfere."

A month ago people had not got over the illusion that cotton could be had from India or somewhere, or that the opening of the Mississippi would furnish it. They see now that all such hopes were utterly fallacious. None comes from New-Orleans. The stock in Liverpool is wasting away, and in three months the supply will be gone. Liverpool supplies the Continent largely. It even sells cotton to New-York and Boston. People call for an Order in Council to prohibit its export, as was done with saltpetre, &c., at the period of the Trent affair. But this will not do. Liverpool is the cotton market of France, Belgium and Germany, as well as of Yorkshire and Lancashire. England cannot seize upon the stock in hand for her own benefit.

There are 500,000 people directly dependent for daily bread upon cotton. There are 5,000,000 interested in the trade, and whose prosperity is more or less dependent upon it. The distress increases. By October the supply will be exhausted, the mills stopped, with a long, dreary Winter before us. You can judge, as well as I, what is likely to be the feeling. The cry of "work, bread or blood" has been raised already.

It is demonstrated that neither in India nor in any country will people engage in the culture of cotton, so long as there is a prospect of American competition, which has destroyed it before, and would again. There are tropical regions, no doubt, where it can be grown, but the difficulty is, that free labor cannot compete with slave labor. An Alabama planter, as everyone knows, can make a thousand bales of cotton, while he feeds his people and pays all expenses by their extra labor, so that his whole cotton crop is clear profit, and this cannot be done anywhere under the existing systems of free labor. In a word, as Mr. AYRTON, M. P., says, "free industry is a failure," or as GARRISON might say, the man who buys his goods cannot compete with the man who steals them.

I know that it has been proven, logically and arithmetically, and according to GUNTER, COCKER, and all the other great authorities, that free labor is cheaper than slave labor—but the fact is, that America, with slave labor, has almost monopolized the cotton culture of the world, and that no capitalists dare enter into competition with it.

The consequence is, that the demand for the interference of Government is more and more urgent. Of course there are many plans for such interference. Some wish the Government to feed the Lancashire operatives until the war is over and the supply of cotton can be restored. Others urge an interference, to bring the war to a more speedy termination. Some ask a Government guarantee of a certain price to the cotton-growers of India and elsewhere, while others think the whole difficulty could be met by a discriminative duty on slave-grown cotton, sufficient to give an even chance to free labor. This, it is argued, would be a death-blow to Slavery, and build up cotton culture in the British dependencies. But it would also be a pretty severe blow to free trade and the ruling principles of political economy. It will probably occur to British manufacturers that such an exclusion of slave-grown cotton, as proposed, would give to America, with a restored Union and the continuance of Slavery, a monopoly of the cotton manufacture of the world. Lawrence and Lowell would ask nothing better.

If you ask what will be done, I cannot tell. I can only call your attention to the situation. The tone of the Press is one angry growl, which seems to be deepening into a roar. The common people, down to the cotton-mongers, talk of intervention. The poverty, distress and starvation, in the most populous part of England, is growing terrible, and must increase for months to come. The Exhibition, the marriage of the Princess ALICE, and the debates on the fortifications and Thames embankment, amuse people for the moment. The attack on the Palmerston Government failed for the time, and may fail from a want of confidence in the active Opposition leader. If Mr. DISRAELI could unite the Opposition, PALMERSTON and RUSSELL could not stay in an hour. When statesmen are in such a position, they must do whatever the country demands. Only let the demand grow urgent in any direction, and they will obey it.

The enlargement of the canals naturally attracts attention, but England does not fail to see that this enlargement only puts our Government on an equal footing with their own. If they have access to the lakes by the St. Lawrence and Welland Canal, why should not our Government by the Hudson and the Erie and Oswego Canals? There is no casus belli in this, nor anywhere. The great difficulty is, that there is no real ground for intervention. Give a good one to-morrow, and you would have the Trent demonstration over again. Whatever may be said of the action of our Government, as judged by its own principles and professions, no European nation can condemn it, when tried by the principles and precedents of Europe. America is only doing what England has done in Scotland, Ireland, Canada, India, and what she tried for seven years to do in America. She is only doing what Russia, and Austria, and France, and Italy have done and are doing, and, whatever may be the public opinion of Europe, the sympathies of European Governments must be with a country which is struggling to maintain its prestige, its power, and the integrity of its territory. These are what all Governments have fought for. Even that of the Pope made a futile attempt to preserve its ancient territories, and still protests against its dismemberment. Would France consent to the independence even of its most recently acquired provinces, Nice and Savoy? Let some country of Europe quietly cut itself in two, before it blames America for wishing to reunite its severed portions, though they must be cemented by the best blood of her loyal and patriotic citizens.

MONADNOCK.

THE TONE OF THE PRESS.

A Sombre and Alarming Picture.

From the London Times, July 9.

But what a destiny are these degenerate and insensate people preparing for themselves? They are not shutting themselves out from all mankind in order to work out some philosophic dream of peace and innocence. They have not even the short-sighted wisdom of the Chinese or the Japanese, who, in their happy conceit, feared to be contaminated by outside intercourse. These people are isolating themselves only in order that they may indulge their own fierce vices uncontrolled. With this object they are reducing themselves to a condition which is a warning to the world. They have at last actually taken upon themselves a system of taxation which is like the cask of REGULUS, so full of points that no man can stand or sit or lie in it without being pricked every moment. They are drafting off day by day the youth of their country to die of pestilence or the sword, or to return to them in a few weeks broken and emaciated for life. Private letters say that MCCLELLAN'S army alone is losing every week before Richmond 2,000 men; and there is a carefully suppressed whisper at Washington that MCCLELLAN himself is stricken with the fever. Even the hirelings and cut-throat of Europe will not much longer be attracted by any promises to such a fate as this. It is evident that the levies begin to fail. At home no man's life, or liberty, or property is secure, for how can life or liberty be secure in a country where the Habeas Corpus Act is suspended indefinitely, where citizens have no redress against unlawful imprisonment, and no available means of obtaining a public trial; and how can property be secure when money is no longer a thing of intrinsic value, and when confiscation and taxation are becoming words of similar meaning? This is the happy Union which the Americans are now making for themselves, and to which they expect that, when it is completed, all mankind will flock. They have but to add to it, as they are now doing, the abnegation of all the comforts of civilized life, and they will soon have to negotiate a Fugitive Slave law with their neighbors to keep their own subjects within their pale.

We have used nothing but simple and notorious facts to describe the condition to which the American Union is either arrived or is evidently tending. But all this, happily, arises from no natural necessity. Nature has been bountiful to this young nation, as she is commonly bountiful to us all in youth. With strong and vicious passions, she has given to it healthy energies, elastic spirits, and abounding strength. As within some tolerable limits a strong young man may indulge in many a reckless quarrel and many a fitful carouse, and yet with timely reformation grow to a strong and sober manhood, so it is with this young and willful people, who have yet resources to fall back upon which we in our ancient society and full-peopled country cannot call to our aid. There is a limit, however, even to the endurance of youthful strength; and South America has already shown that it is possible for nations as well as individuals to die young. The broken States of North America seem to be fast approaching that point when they must become two reasonable nations, or go on to anarchy and dissolution.

The Cotton Supply in England.

A writer to the London Times says:

To give some idea of the dangerous position we are placed in, I beg to call special attention to the state of the Liverpool cotton market. The stock of cotton at present in Liverpool (July 4, 1862) is 180,450 bales, against 1,108,060 bales at the same date in 1861, and 1,207,030 bales in 1860. The cotton sold for export in the last five weeks has averaged upwards of 25,000 bales per week, and if this foreign demand continues, which it is very likely to do, it will create a most serious drain upon our supply. The average export of cotton from the United Kingdom to foreign Europe in the last three years has been about 11,000 bales per week, and they have been accustomed to import direct from the United States about 21,000 bales per week, but this latter source of their supply is now stopped; yet, should they continue to import from us only at half the same rate as in the past five weeks, our position three months hence would be as follows:

	Bales.
Stock of cotton in Liverpool, July 4, 1862	180,450
To arrive in Liverpool from India in the next three months (say to Oct. 4)	258,256
Estimated imports of other sorts from July 4 to Oct. 4, as in same period, 1861:
From the Brazils, West Indies and Egypt	50,559
Perhaps from America	10,000
	60,599
Supply up to Oct. 4	499,305
Required for consumption on the average of the first six months, 1862	352,440
Sales for export, say at 12,000 bales per week	144,000
	496,440
Stock in Liverpool, Oct. 4, 1862	2,865

To further show the depressing position of this trade, I give the stock of cotton in the foreign European ports on the 1st of July, 1862, and the quantity at sea from India at that date, and which is expected to arrive within the next three months:

Stock of Cotton in Foreign Europe.	Bales.	Cotton at Sea from India.	Bales.
1861	411,700	1861	314,467
1862	33,700	1862	282,642
Decrease, 1862	378,000	Decrease, 1862	31,825

In its last "Trade and Finance" article the London Daily News says:

"It would really appear that, when relief comes to the cotton trade, it will not come from the efforts of the Manchester men, nor yet from public meetings or public companies, but simply from the slow yet sure operation of those infallible laws of commerce which some of the advocates of the manufacturers now so strangely contemn. There is one plain fact staring us in the face which is worth a twelvemonth of speech-making and a ton weight of letter-writing—cotton is worth trebis its ordinary price. Each mail from England will dim this in the ears of merchants, dealers and producers in every part of the world, and will add fresh assurances that not only is the last crop of American cotton daily becoming less available, and less likely ever to be available, but that there will be no American crop worth speaking of next season. The chance of an inundation of cotton from the old slave-ridden source is rapidly disappearing, and the inducement to grow the article elsewhere increases in proportion. If a rise of some two hundred per cent, above its normal value does not increase the supply of a commodity which will grow over a vast belt of the globe, there is no truth in the laws of trade or of supply and demand, and all our commercial notions are false. The supply, under this forcing action, will assuredly come, but the evil is that, owing to the apathy of the trade, it will not come in adequate quantity until after a prolonged delay, which will yet sorely waste the capital and substance of the country and impoverish the population."

A Quarrel between Palmerston and Cobden.

Lord PALMERSTON and RICHARD COBDEN have fallen out. In the House of Commons, on the 7th inst., during a debate on the Fortification bill, Mr. COBDEN observed that the facts proved that the former statements as to the French navy had been incorrect, and he asked whether there was any man accustomed to public affairs who had not been led by Lord PALMERSTON to believe that the French had unduly altered the proportion which their navy bore to ours in former times? And that was the reason why the House had been called upon to vote enormous estimates for the navy. He had had as good an opportunity as Lord PALMERSTON himself for knowing the state of both navies, and he undertook to say, in opposition to his assertion, that, for the last twelve or fourteen years, the French navy had borne a far less proportion to that of England than in the time of LOUIS PHILIPPE. He read statements of the expenditure in the French and English dock-yards, and of the number of seamen in the two navies, and asked, if these statements could not be gainsaid, what foundation was there for these gigantic fortifications? He maintained that the exaggerated accounts of the increase of the French navy were wholly delusive, and he cited various statements made by Lord PALMERSTON of the forces of France, naval and military, the correctness of which he challenged.

Lord PALMERSTON observed that he received the accusations of Mr. COBDEN with the utmost possible quietness. Differing as they did, these accusations were quite natural. Mr. Cobden was in a state of blindness and delusion which made him unfit to be listened to as an adviser upon a question of this kind. He had accused him of great exaggerations. He denied the charge; his statements had been confirmed by papers before the House. Mr. COBDEN had instituted a comparison between the expenditure in the French and English dockyards and the naval estimates in the two countries; but these comparisons were fundamentally fallacious as a measure of relative strength. He was satisfied that the ideas of Mr. COBDEN on this subject were confined to very few, and that his censures would not damage him (Lord PALMERSTON) in the opinion of his countrymen.

The London Times, commenting upon this passage at arms, remarks:

"It appears that the fire has only been smouldering for years, that Mr. COBDEN has all along regarded Lord PALMERSTON as the chief enemy of peace and quiet; while Lord PALMERSTON has equally regarded him as a man fit to 'cobble' a treaty of trade, but without a head or soul for anything better."

New Experiments with the Armstrong Gun.

The 300-pounder Armstrong gun, which, since its proof with 90 lbs. of powder, has been in a dangerous state, was yesterday again used at Shoeburyness, against iron plates, at a range of two hundred yards. The target represented a portion of the side of the new class of steam-frigates to which the Minotaur belongs. In these frigates the armor is 5½ inches thick, instead of 4½ inches, as in the Warrior, but the thickness of the teak backing is reduced from 18 inches to 9 inches. The inner skin and iron framing are the same as in the Warrior. For the first three trials the shot was of cast iron, and the charge was 50 lbs., as usual. No. 1 struck and pierced the centre plate, damaging but not passing through the inner skin and framing. No. 2 struck the upper plate, and went completely through armor, timber, and skin. No. 3 was directed against the lower plate, and, like No. 2, passed quite through the target. The fourth shot was of wrought iron, and the charge was 50 pounds, as before. At this round, however, the gun gave way, the breech being blown backwards to a distance of 30 or 40 yards. The gun did not break into fragments, and no one was hurt. The experience gained by these extreme tests will doubtless be made available in the construction of the new gun of this description now nearly ready for service.

Commercial by City of Washington.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

The funds were firm, and Consols had advanced to 92¾@92⅞, for both money and account.

The influx of gold to the Bank was very heavy, and a reduction in the rate of discount was anticipated.

There was a slight increase in the demand for discount at the Bank. The supply in the open market continued abundant.

American Securities still showed a downward tendency.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, July 9—P. M.

COTTON—The sales of the past three days, including to-day, (Wednesday,) foot up 35,000 bales, including 20,000 on speculation and for export. On Monday and Tuesday prices were called ⅛d.@¼d. over Saturday's rates, but to-day a decidedly quieter tone prevails, the sales being only 8,000.

TRADE AT MANCHESTER.—A good inquiry exists, but producers demand such exceedingly high prices that business is greatly checked. Buyers would pay a considerable advance, but not the high rates that are expected.

BREADSTUFFS—The weather has been more favorable. Messrs. RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co., WAKEFIELD, NASH & Co., and BIGLAND, ATAYA & Co. report: Flour flat, at 6d. decline, 24s.@28s. 6d. Wheat quiet, and 1d.@2d. lower under finer weather and the heavy imports; Red Western, 9s. 6d.@11s.; Southern Red, 9s. 10d.@11s.; White, 11s. 6d.@12s. Central. Corn quiet and a shade easier; Mixed and Yellow, 27s. 9d.@28s. quarter.

PROVISIONS.—Beef and Pork still very dull and quite nominal. Bacon in moderate demand at late rates. Butter and Cheese very dull. Lard quiet, 39s. @42s. Tallow steady, 42s.@45s. 6d.

PRODUCE.—Sugar very inactive. Coffee, nothing doing. Rice steady. Ashes quiet. Pearls, 36s; Pots, 35s.@35s. 6d. Linseed Oil, 40s. 3d.@41s. Resin again dearer. Common, 22s.@23s. Spirits of Turpentine firm at 105s.

Gen. Twigg's Swords.

Gen. BUTLER has sent to President LINCOLN the following characteristic letter, giving the history of the seizure of the swords of the traitor TWIGGS:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
NEW-ORLEANS, July 1, 1862.

To the President:

SIR: I have the honor to send you, with this note, three swords, with their equipments, formerly belonging to DAVID E. TWIGGS, late Brevet Major-General in the army of the United States. They are all presentation swords; one given him by resolution of Congress, which bears the following legend:

"Presented by the President of the United States, agreeable to a resolution of Congress, to Brig.-Gen. DAVID E. TWIGGS, in testimony of the high sense entertained by Congress of his gallantry and good conduct in storming Monterey.

Resolution approved March 2, 1847.

Another was presented by the State of Georgia, and bears the following legend and inscription:

CONSTITUTION.

The State of Georgia to Major-Gen. DAVID E. TWIGGS, United States Army, as a tribute to his gallantry in Mexico, 1847. Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, Monterey, Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo, Chepultepec, Molino del Rey, Mexico.

The third was presented by his native city, Augusta, Ga., and has the following legend:

"TEXAS—8TH AND 9TH OF MAY, 1846.
MONTERREY, VERA CRUZ, CERRO GORDO.
To Gen. DAVID E. TWIGGS, from the City of Augusta, Georgia."

Gen. TWIGGS left these swords with a young woman on the evening before he fled from New-Orleans, and in his flight on the day of the approach of the fleet he wrote in his carriage, while en route, this extraordinary paper:

I leave my swords to Miss ——, and box of silver.
D. E. TWIGGS.

NEW-ORLEANS, April 25, 1862.

This paper was claimed as a deed of gift of these very valuable weapons by the young woman named: but as she had neglected to inform her father of this singular donation—causa fugæ—and as the girl's mother caused them to be sent back to Gen. TWIGG'S house, I ventured to interfere with this testamentary disposition. A more lamentable instance of the degradation to which this rebellion has reduced its votaries can hardly be imagined. Swords given to a General for courage and good conduct in the armies of the Union—tokens of admiration by his fellow-citizens, and of the gratitude of a State and the nation—voluntarily bequeathed for safe keeping to a woman, as a more proper custodian than himself, by that same General, when, flying at the approach of the armies of that country which he had renounced and betrayed, at last find a depository with a negro, for the sake of enslaving whose race the double crime of treachery and rebellion has been consummated.

Now that the weapon given by the United States is returned to the Executive, and the others placed at his disposal, might I take leave to suggest a proper disposition of them. Might not the first be presented to some officer as a token of appreciation of loyalty and devotion to the country? The qualities of courage and good conduct on the battle-field have never been found wanting in our armies; but loyalty and entire devotion to the country have failed in so many examples, of which Gen. TWIGGS is a shining one, that some token of respect for those qualities, bestowed in this manner, might not be inappropriate.

The sword from the State of Georgia might be deposited in the library at West Point, with an appropriate inscription, as a perpetual memento to the youth there, how worse than useless are all education and military training, even when allied to gallantry and courage, if heartfelt patriotism and undying fealty to the Constitution and the flag are wanting.

That given by the city of Augusta might be deposited in the Patent Office, as a warning against the folly and uselessness of such an invention as secession.

Pardon the freedom of these suggestions, and believe me, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

BENJ. F. BUTLER.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We have advices from the James River to the afternoon of Monday, at which time everything was very quiet. Our transports and mailboats were allowed to pass down the river without being interfered with by the rebels. A large number of our wounded men, paroled by the rebels, have arrived at Fortress Monroe.

An official bulletin, issued by the War Department, directs the military commanders within the States of Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, to seize and use any property real or personal, which may be necessary or convenient for their several commands, for supplies and for other military purposes; that military and naval commanders shall employ as laborers, within and from said States, so many persons of African descent as can be advantageously used for military or naval purposes—accounts being kept of both property and persons taken as directed, that compensation may be made in proper cases.

The President has issued an order in reference to aliens, which directs the Commanders of Military Departments hereafter to abstain from requiring the oaths heretofore exacted of those foreign residents who desired to trade or travel under Government authority, and to institute instead such obligations and restraints as they shall find necessary, convenient and effectual for the public safety.

Gen. HALLECK, it will be seen by our dispatches, arrived in Washington last evening. It will also be seen that Gen. BURNSIDE left Fortress Monroe for Washington, on Monday. The result of the consultations of the President with the distinguished Generals now gathered at the capital will soon be known to the country.

The rebels are building, above Gen. MCCLELLAN'S position at Turkey Island Bend, at Curt's Neck and Dutch Gap, large and massive batteries. Our gunboats have been up on several occasions, and driven them from their work. But the moment the gunboats leave the vicinity, the men return to the batteries, and probably, by this time, have them equipped and ready for active operations.

The Norfolk Union calls upon the military authorities to exercise greater vigilance in checking the constant communication which the rebels in that place hold with their friends in Richmond. By this channel it says important information of National movements is constantly passing.

It was stated in an extract from the Richmond Enquirer, published yesterday, that a number of our vessels lately above Vicksburgh had run down past the batteries there, through their fire and that of the ram Arkansas. It now appears from our own dispatches, that an effort was made by Commodore FARRAGUT to destroy the Arkansas, but that it failed. His entire fleet above Vicksburgh ran down, each vessel pouring a broadside into the ram as she passed. The rebels assert that but one shot penetrated the ram's armor.

The Louisville papers have informed us that a large force of cavalry and infantry, under the command of Col. CICERO MAXWELL, who saw active service at Fort Donelson and Shiloh, had left Lexington, Ky., in pursuit of the guerrilla MORGAN. The noted marauder has at last been overtaken, and pretty roughly handled. Our cavalry overtook him on the road to Owensville, from Mount Sterling. After a fight, continuing an hour and a half, the guerrillas were completely scattered, and the cannon and horses captured by MORGAN at Cynthiana were retaken, as well as a large portion of the stolen property. The rebels lost twenty-five men killed, and the National loss was twenty.

A private of the Third Minnesota Regiment arrived at Nashville on Thursday from Murfreesboro. He reports that at the time he left there were one to two hundred Texan Rangers at that place, who were busily engaged, with the help of the citizens, in barricading the town. He says that the privates were bitterly opposed to surrendering to the guerrillas. The officers took a vote on surrendering, which stood six for and three against it. There were not over 800 of our soldiers altogether. The Minnesota regiment lost eight or ten killed and 20 wounded. Gen. CRITTENDEN was in bed at the hotel when he was taken prisoner.

GENERAL NEWS.

At Goshen, Orange County, in this State, yesterday, the eighty-third anniversary of the battle of Minnisink was celebrated with peculiarly appropriate ceremonies. The occasion was signalized by the dedication of a new monument, just erected in honor of the deceased, through the munificence of the late Dr. MERRITT H. CASH, of Orange County, who bequeathed in charge of the County the sum of $4,000 for that purpose. Citizens flocked to witness the ceremonies from all the adjoining counties. There was a grand procession, reception speeches and an oration by JOHN C. DIMMOCK, of New-York. The citizens of Goshen did their best to accommodate the visitors, and the entire affair was unmarred by any untoward occurrence.

The United States steam transport Vanderbilt, from Hampton Roads, from Fortress Monroe with the United States Hospital Ship Empire in tow, arrived yesterday. Since the destruction of the Merrimac the Vanderbilt has been employed in the transportation of troops, horses and army stores, also in towing Government transports to and from several points South. She left Port Royal July 13 for Fortress Monroe, with Gen. STEVENS and staff and two regiments of his brigade, consisting of the Fifty-ninth Pennsylvania and the Eighth Michigan on board, and also towed the gunboat Flambeau from Port Royal to Hampton Roads. She left Fortress Monroe for this port July 20, at 9 P. M.

There are now over eleven hundred contrabands in Norfolk, who are doing very little to earn their bread.

On Monday afternoon four rebel prisoners passed through Philadelphia on their way to Fort Lafayette. They were arrested on James River, within Gen. MCCLELLAN'S lines, and are supposed to be spies. They behaved in such an outrageous manner, notwithstanding the presence of the usual guard, that it was found necessary to place them in double irons. Before this, however, while on their way up the Chesapeake Bay, one of them seized a musket from the hands of the guard, and ran the bayonet through the side of the latter, inflicting a wound which will probably result in his death. After this the four made a desperate attempt to escape, but were finally secured.

Capt. MOORE, of the Tenth Wisconsin Regiment, which is guarding the railroad near Huntsville, Ala., was shot by guerrillas on July 4, while on a scout.

The Annual Convention of American Dentists will sit this year at Trenton Falls, on Tuesday, August 5, at 10 o'clock A. M., and will continue in session several days.

The Stock Market was dull yesterday. The Government Stocks 97¾ at the close. The Railways lost the advance of Monday; New-York Central 91¾ ₩ cent. Gold was unsettled, 120 at the opening, 119¾@¾ at the close. Exchange 131 ₩ cent. at the close Holders of the principal kinds of Breadstuffs were enabled to obtain rather higher prices early in the day, but the depression in Gold and Sterling Exchanges subsequently discouraged export buyers, and the market closed less buoyantly. Groceries were in active request, and were advancing. Moderate sales were made of Hay, Hops, Manila Hemp, Candles, Pig Lead, Spelter, Spices, Soap and Whisky. Pork was plenty and heavy. Cut Meats and Lard were more sought after. Ingot Copper was freely purchased at firmer rates. Cotton, Iron, Laths, Fruit, Tin and Whalebone were lightly dealt in. Tallow and Tobacco were in fair demand. The Freight engagements were more extensive, as shippers had any existing advantage.

The live stock markets show a large gain of animals compared with last week. There are 2,000 more cattle, 1,700 more sheep, and 5,000 more hogs. The markets were overstocked, and prices lower, though from the small number last week, butchers were ready to buy pretty freely, the more so under the temptation of lower rates. Beeves came in scattering, and prices declined ½c. from the commencement of the sales on Monday morning to the close on Tuesday night. Most of the cattle were of good fair quality, even flesh, corn-fed last winter and well grazed this Summer. For a few of them 8½c. was obtained, though 8c. was the prevailing price for fat steers, some of which were sold before the close at 7½c. and even 7c. A few lots were withdrawn from market after it was known that 5,150 were on sale at ALLERTON'S, and of those remaining, probably 200 could not be sold. The market was particularly hard on those who bought cattle at Albany to speculate upon here. Sheep are plenty. Business has been unsettled, and prices have fluctuated, but close about as last week, or a shade higher. Good sheep are worth 4c. ₩ lb, live weight. Live hogs are abundant, but with a scant supply last week, and cooler weather during the past few days, prices have been fully sustained, and trade exhibits a fair degree of activity. Prime corn fed hogs are now selling at 3¾c.@3¾c. ₩ lb.

Military Power of the Rebels Exhausted —Ours not yet Called Out.

It is a most singular fact that the varying fortunes of the war should be attended by such depressions of popular feeling and such agitations of the financial world as we witness. Not one man in ten thousand of all our people doubts the power of the loyal States and their unyielding purpose to suppress the rebellion, though the effort should cost their entire available wealth, and demand the service in the field of every citizen who is capable of bearing arms. We know that if the whole power of the Republic is put forth the rebellion must be overwhelmed.

The discouragements, then, that come upon the country, are simply owing to the inadequate measures that have been taken to meet the danger that presses upon us. With the ability to put a million men in the field, and to maintain the ranks full till the end of the war, we have stopped at half the number, and taken no precautions against the wasting away by battle and disease. The rebels began by boasts of pitting successfully one soldier against five of ours. In practice they have been forced to outnumber us in every fight in order to obtain a victory, or the slightest advantage over us. At the present time the rebel conscription law makes every Southern man a soldier. The newspapers recently enumerated their male population at over 700,000, who could be counted on to bear arms. Clearly, then, the rebel Government has played its last and its highest card. It can bring no more men to its aid. If we can organize to beat their present forces, the day is lost to them forever.

But under no circumstances is it likely that more than two-thirds of the rebel army, volunteer and conscript, can be put successfully in the field. Disease, desertion, natural disability, and class exemptions, will diminish their census army of 700,000 by fully one-third—leaving 450,000 as the utmost number that the rebel Government can force into its army. The question is, can the loyal North meet and overcome that force?

We need not argue the proposition. Its bare statement is sufficient. We know that the loyal States can put an army into the field quite equal to this, the utmost stretch of rebel conscription—and then, with comparative ease, add one million to the number.

It is, with our Government, simply a question of effort and of time. The fault is our own that the war lingers. If the Government call into the field, at once, half a million new and fresh men, the rebels can do nothing to meet such a levy. They have already strained themselves to the uttermost. Conscription has done its worst, and tender youths from Southern schools have been allowed to fill up their thinned ranks. Every man that now falls in their columns, leaves us one less to encounter in all future fights. Their candle is lighted at both ends, and between disease and battle, they must rapidly melt away from our front.

Here we have every encouragement for redoubled efforts to push the enemy to extremities. Our new soldiers are full grown and ready for their field. Their new men, if they get any, have yet to grow up. They have them not; they have impressed all that are able to serve, and even drawn heavily on the second generation. And these are perishing daily by disease and the sword.

The effort is all we need, to make the war brief and disastrous to the desperate rebels in arms. The Government should not need prompting to that effort; but if it does, the people should not hesitate to dictate its will.

We are sure that a half million men could be had as easily—shall we not say more easily—than the three hundred thousand called for. The reason is manifest. The people would feel and know that with a half million fresh men, (against which the rebels could not muster a fresh ten thousand), the war would be practically ended—ended, perhaps, without fighting. Having this confidence in the result of instant success and immediate peace, men would flock into the ranks more freely. Who would not rather be one of a half million men, going to war, than one of three hundred thousand?

The Government can give the country heart and confidence, and abiding peace in its business interests, by simply calling out men to overrun the rebel States, and push every traitor into the Gulf. Let it be done.

Two Important Points of Military Policy Settled.

The President, through the Secretary of War, has just issued a very important order, which will settle, for the remainder of this war, two points of military policy, regarding which there has been wide discussion, and for lack of which there has been much embittered feeling. The first provision of the order is, in brief, that military commanders within the rebel States shall seize any property which may be needed for supplies or other military purposes; and the second provision is that commanders shall employ as laborers so many slaves as are needed for military or naval purposes. Both of these measures are strictly within the established rules provided for an army when operating in an enemy's country.

With regard to the first, there has been universal complaint on the part of our troops that they were denied the commonest necessaries of life, while in the enemy's country, when the rebels did not choose to supply them; and that, in some commands, they were employed more in guarding rebel property than in crushing out the rebellion. Both on the part of the public and the soldiers, indeed, there has been an outcry for some such provision as this now made; and its promulgation is a sign that, while the rebels are waging unmitigated war upon us, some, at least, of the ordinary and necessary conditions of war shall be applied to them.

The second provision, to the effect that slaves of rebels may be employed as military laborers, will also be received with universal gratification. Whatever may be the difference of opinion as to arming slaves, there can be no objection to using them to do the heavy labor of the camp and the trenches, while our soldiers are left free for the duties of drill or the proper work of the field.

This order follows immediately upon the arrival of Gen. HALLECK in Washington. It is possibly the first of the signs of the vigor and determination which the new functionary will apply to the conduct of military affairs. Whatever may be Gen. HALLECK'S private or political opinions, or his previous action on any point, he understands that now the nation is engaged in a war in which every legitimate means must be employed, and every energy called forth.

Volunteering and Bounties—Need of a Reform in the Present Method.

The roundabout method adopted by the Government in making the new call for three hundred thousand volunteers, does not appear to work happily. It is now evident that it would have been much better had the required levy been made in precisely the same manner as the previous ones, namely by Proclamation from the President direct, instead of coming circuitously as a proposition from the Governors of the several States. It would have secured the needed unity of action; while, at the same time, by appealing directly to the people, it would have shown a juster appreciation of and fuller confidence in the spirit that animates them.

One of the worst results that have come from making the new levy a State in place of a National affair, is the extravagance, rivalry and confusion in the "bounties" that are being offered for recruits. States, cities and individuals, are each in the field with their several bids for volunteers. There are municipal bounties offered as high as a hundred and twenty-five dollars! The States offer, some nothing, some twenty-five dollars, some fifty, some seventy-five. There are individual premiums in the market, ranging all the way from five dollars to a small fortune. We have no desire to deprecate this generosity. It springs from a very pure and praiseworthy motive. But no social law is more firmly established than the ill effect of misdirected benevolence.

The result of this competition is simply to bring down volunteering to a mere mercenary affair. Each man has his price. And when it comes to this pass, each man wants to put his price as high as possible. One State gives fifty dollars bounty; it does not stimulate the ardor of volunteers to learn that another State gives seventy-five. One town gives fifty dollars—a neighboring town gives a hundred. You immediately say all men rush to the latter to enlist; but they do not—they wait to see if their town will not increase the bounty to a hundred dollars also. This vague notion that a higher rate may yet be offered if need be, has an incalculably ill effect. It saps the very springs of that fine spontaniety and unselfish alacrity we have hitherto seen in volunteering. Human nature should not be put to such a test.

It is interesting to observe that what we may thus deduce from abstract considerations of human nature, is perfectly borne out by the facts of experience. In the matter of bounties, we are now, in fact, repeating one of the acknowledged blunders of the Revolutionary War. No subject engaged the attention of Gen. WASHINGTON more assiduously, and his published correspondence is replete with constantly recurring communications addressed to the Continental Congress (the war body of that era) on the "thousand evils" arising from the "inequality, interference and competition of State bounties." Thus, on the 15th of January, 1779, he wrote to the President of Congress as follows:

"I said in that case no bounty ought to be spared; but when I reflect upon the enormous State bounties already given, I can hardly advise an addition to the Continental bounty, nor am I clear whether it would have the effect intended. If all the State bounties in money could be abolished, from the inequality, interference, and competition of which I am persuaded the recruiting service has greatly suffered, I should recommend the Continental bounty to be raised as high as $150, or perhaps higher, and that this should be extended to recruiting in the country as well as in the army. The expense on this plan would be less, and the success I believe greater."

Again, on the 15th of March in the same year, he wrote to the President of Congress as follows:

"The measure of enlisting in the country, in my opinion, depends so much on the abolishing of State bounties, that without it I am doubtful whether it will be worth the experiment. State bounties have been a source of immense expense and many misfortunes. The sooner the practice can be abolished, and system introduced in our manner of recruiting and keeping up our battalions, as well as in the administration of the several departments of the army, the sooner will our security be established and placed out of the reach of contingencies. Temporary expedients, to serve the purposes of the moment, occasion more difficulties and expense than can easily be conceived."

Equally significant are the following remarks:

"They induce the soldier, who has undergone a long service, and who engaged in the war in the first instance on a very moderate bounty, to reason upon his situation, and to draw a comparison between what he receives and the great emoluments others get, and put him upon inventing means from which he will be able to derive the same advantage. And from this comparison and these considerations it is, I am convinced, that most of our desertions proceed, especially where the men do not go to the enemy."

There are important elements that prevent the full application of this mode of reasoning to the present case. For example, our volunteers are drawn largely from the manufacturing population—a class that had no existence in WASHINGTON'S time, and whose necessities are peculiar; but the general scope of the argument is, beyond a doubt, as good to-day as it was eighty years ago.

It will not be concluded from this that we would have had no bounty offered. On the contrary, we think a sufficient premium just and desirable. But we would have had it made uniform, and free from the competition, confusion and debasing tendency of our present method of bidding for recruits. The Government now gives an advance bounty of $25 to each volunteer; it should have increased it to $50; or it should have been agreed upon by the Governors of the States that a uniform bounty of say $50 should be offered in addition to the Government's $25. The present system is the worst that could have been devised; many urge that even such uniformity as drafting brings would be preferable to the present chaotic plan. This evil should be promptly remedied. We are glad to observe, by a Washington telegram which we publish to-day, that the subject has been brought to the attention of the Secretary of War, and hope to see forthwith either a general order from the President, or a common understanding arrived at by the authorities of the respective States.

The Designs of France in Mexico and the United States.

In another part of this morning's issue will be found a highly interesting and important letter from our Paris correspondent, relative to the designs of France in Mexico, and the menace to the United States that possibly may be concealed under the extensive preparations being made to dispatch a large naval force to the Mexican Gulf.

From the correspondence alluded to, it would appear that the wise policy of Admiral DE LA GRAVIERE, which looked to the withdrawal of the remnant of French forces in Mexico by some honorable mode, has been suddenly and most unexpectedly abandoned, to give place to the insane, ruinous policy of the pestiferous SALIGNY and his fellow-conspirators against freedom and justice on this continent.

It will be remembered by the readers of this journal that, just after the defeat of the French near Puebla, our Mexican correspondence stated that an agent had left Mexico for France from each, ALMONTE, Padre MIRANDA and M. SALIGNY. Our Paris correspondent states that these three agents arrived at the same time. A Cabinet Council was immediately convened at Fontainbleu, under the Presidency of the Emperor. The dispatch from M. SALIGNY is said to have been a lengthy and able defence of the policy he has always urged in Mexico, and which policy is believed to be the overthrow of the Juarez Government, an armed occupation of the country, a cession of territory to France, and a proclamation in favor of the reconstruction of the "Latin races" in America.

It is confidently stated that this, the original policy of the Emperor, "was readopted, and that of M. DE LA GRAVIERE sunk back to the second place." Twenty-five thousand men will be placed under the command of Gen. FOREY, and a most formidable fleet, containing four cuirassed frigates, is to be commanded by Admiral DE LA GRAVIERE.

This formidable expedition, it has been suggested, is out of all proportion to the wants of the service, and that, in connection with Mexico, it has in view eventualities likely to arise in the United States. The Count DE PERSIGNY, who, it appears, has completed what he was short of being a thorough Secessionist, since his visit to England, urges forward the expedition to Mexico, the concentration of a powerful fleet in the Mexican Gulf, and the immediate recognition of the so-called Southern Confederacy.

We have held on to the traditional friendship of France for this country and its institutions as an anchor of hope in the midst of the wild tossing of our nationality on the sea of trouble that is raging around us, and which threatens to overwhelm the Ship of State, now on one side and then on the other. But if we are to have this everlasting evidence of positive ill-will, and hatred even, on the part of the French Government, then the sooner the United States and France understand each other the better. If we must look upon the French people and the French Emperor as enemies, then we say to NAPOLEON go ahead in your Mexican schemes and in your designs, if you have them, to bring about disunion and anarchy in the United States. The Emperor's worst enemy could not devise a better plan to insure the speedy downfall of the Empire, as is contained in the delusive counsels of the wily speculators in the nationalities of this continent.

It may be the design of Providence that our own salvation is to be wrought out of the foolishness of great European Powers, who may selfishly, meanly, fiendishly take advantage of the tribulation of the Great Republic to destroy it.

The Union Column at Cumberland Gap.

Probably the few people who ever knew the fact, have quite forgotten it, that we have a pretty large column of National troops in East Tennessee—at Cumberland Gap. When, in the early part of this year, the rebels evacuated Bowling Green, and the various divisions of our troops in Kentucky followed them southward, this column was left in Southeastern Kentucky, for the purpose of capturing the rebel stronghold at Cumberland Gap—which had been regarded as probably the most formidable and valuable strategic position in the South—and afterward penetrating into East Tennessee. The column remained, doing various work and with varied fortune, in the hilly and desolate regions in Eastern Kentucky during the whole of the Spring, and till well on in the present Summer. At the beginning of last month it was still on the Northern side of the Cumberland Mountains. At length, on the 18th of June, Gen. MORGAN, its commander, and a very able and gallant officer, obtained possession of the long-coveted Cumberland Gap, by one of the most difficult and scientific operations of the war, but which, on account of the more immediately important news we were at that time receiving from Virginia, was almost entirely overlooked by the Press. He, for a time, so manœuvered his troops, that the enemy at the Gap could get no clue whatever to his purposes; and when, finally, having made a terrible march of a hundred miles, over mountains heretofore considered impassable, he fell upon their rear, they fled in confusion, and the Southern Thermopylæ, which a thousand men might have successfully defended, fell into his hands. It was universally supposed by those who had followed up Gen. MORGAN'S movements, and understood the military and political situation in that section of country, that he would at once push on to Knoxville, the capture of which would have been equivalent to the possession of nearly the whole of East Tennessee. The retention of the Gap was of vast importance to the rebels, as the means of keeping us out of East Tennessee; but the position once in our hands, it was of value only as the gateway to further conquests. Gen. MORGAN, however, with his whole force, still remains at Cumberland Gap—a force which, though the rebels overestimate it when they state it to be 20,000 strong, is yet of very considerable numbers, and is amply able, with a little of the assistance near at hand, to take military possession of all of East Tennessee. He remains there in obedience to orders.

We call attention to his situation at present, because, being forbidden to move from Cumberland Gap, Gen. MORGAN'S command is placed in imminent danger by the manœuvres of his namesake, the guerrilla MORGAN. All the supplies of our troops at the Gap are drawn through Eastern Kentucky upon ox-teams, over a hundred miles of hills, rocks, and ruts, such as cannot be found on the continent outside of that region. Yesterday it was announced by telegraph that the guerrilla chief had attacked one of these supply trains, destroyed the wagons, and, we suppose, consumed the victuals. It is in his power with a small force to cut off entirely the supplies; and, as he seems to be now retiring in a southerly direction, there is nothing more likely than that this is really the work he has set out to do. We have had so many military surprises of late months that it is well to be warned wherever there is the least danger; and if, by Gen. BUELL'S moving a force forward to and reducing Chattanooga, he were able to form a junction at or near Knoxville with Gen. MORGAN, not only would the latter be put out of peril, but East Tennessee, so long neglected, would be restored to the protection of the stars and stripes. If there is any one thing the nation desires, next to the capture of Richmond, it is the liberation of East Tennessee. If there is any one thing which would inflict a severer blow than another upon the almost broken fortunes of the rebels in the Southwest, and in the far South, and aid in stopping at once the ravages of guerrillas, it would be the occupation of the points indicated—Chattanooga and Knoxville. The other and innumerable advantages of obtaining East Tennessee are now every day more apparent, as each movement of the rebels, whether in the East or West, makes it more imperative. Gen. MORGAN is now in a position of difficulty and danger; but properly supported, he has the skill, the valor and the men to push forward and capture Knoxville, as soon as he is ordered.

Morgan's Raid into Kentucky.

The Morgan raid in Kentucky has not been a success. Much was undoubtedly hoped for by the rebels. Their infatuation in regard to Kentucky, Missouri and Maryland has been marvelous. They have claimed those States all the time as their own, and kept up a pretence of Government for two of them, of the most absurd and ridiculous character. The rebel Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of Missouri have been for nearly twelve months wandering homeless, expelled from their State by the citizens whose confidence they had betrayed. In Kentucky a provisional rebel State Government was set up, on the Southern boundary line, that never exercised sway over a half dozen counties of the State, and that fiction of a Government is now lost. Yet, by virtue of such vagabond and paltry organizations, both Kentucky and Missouri were nominally united to the rebel Confederacy, and representatives were admitted from those States to the Richmond Congress.

The rebel leaders continually speak of the Border States as their own territorial appurtenances, whose devoted inhabitants are suffering all [illegible] despotism. [illegible] to believe that a [illegible] States to be rid of the presence of Northern troops, and the people would thereupon rise en masse and throw off their hated connection with the Union. They have strengthened their hearts on such hopes, and drawn largely upon the treasury of the future to support present discouragements and reverses.

Undoubtedly, secret traitors in all the Border States have encouraged the delusion of the rebels on this subject. And they have advised the "partisan leaders" of the South when and where they might safely and perhaps successfully strike a blow for the enfranchisement of the Border States. The attempt has been made in Kentucky, and the result is a palpable and disheartening failure. MORGAN entered that State with a high-sounding proclamation of military leadership and protection. The people did not rise to meet him. He advanced boldly toward the heart of the State, to give show of power and inspire confidence. The people did not greet him as a deliverer, but avoided him as a scourge. He went still forward toward the Ohio, but found his force diminishing and his foes increasing, and the voice of the State going up in one united call for his utter extermination. Perforce, he leaves the loyal State of Kentucky, and withdraws his scattered followers to the more congenial soil of the seceded States.

What report will he make to the Confederate Government of the result of his expedition? He cannot say that Northern troops resisted his advance into Kentucky. He cannot say that Northern troops overawed the people of Kentucky and prevented them from joining his standard. There was positively no military force in the State beyond what was absolutely necessary to guard, with reasonable care, the Government stores at Louisville, and other military posts of the State. But he met no sympathy, and obtained no recruits. Whole counties went under martial law, and organized under home officers to resist his advance. Scattered detachments of State Volunteers began to gather in force to sweep down on his marauding band, and he took counsel of his caution, if not of his fears, and retired from his enterprise with the poor glory of having pulled up a few bars of iron and interrupted railroad travel for one or two days, whereby his escape was secured.

The raid of MORGAN into Kentucky is, therefore, not a success—it is a bad failure. It reveals the weakness of secession sentiment where the rebels have always believed it ready to flame out. They cannot count in future on any damaging diversions against the Union cause in that quarter. When they invade Kentucky again it will be to punish the contumacious loyalty of her people, and to take, by robbery and plunder, what is not given as a freewill offering to treason. Kentucky will understand this, and be prepared for the fierce war of rebel revenge.

THE WAR ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Destroy the Rebel Ram Arkansas.

Farragut's Fleet Again Below the Vicksburgh Batteries.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, July 22.

A special dispatch to the Times, of this city, from Memphis, dated Sunday night, says:

"The rebel ram Arkansas succeeded in running through our fleet. Commodore FARRAGUT made an ineffectual attempt to sink her. His entire fleet passed down the river, each vessel pouring a broadside into the Arkansas as she passed them. The rebels acknowledge that one 7-inch steel pointed shot went through the Arkansas, but assert that this is the only damage she sustained. A reconnoissance the next morning showed that the Arkansas was undergoing repairs, but she did not appear to be in any danger of sinking."

THE FIGHT WITH THE ARKANSAS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, July 22.

The Navy Department to-day received the following official report:

CAIRO, via CHICAGO, Monday, July 21.

The rebel gunboat Arkansas, armed with twelve rifled sixty-eight pounders, came out of the Yazoo River on Tuesday. She encountered first the Tyler, Carondelet and ram Lancaster. After a running fight of ten miles the Carondelet closed with the rebel and both vessels grounded, fighting side by side. The rebel being outside succeeded in getting off. The Tyler steamed ahead, maintaining a running fight until the fleet was reached. Our transports being in range, preventing an effective fire from our gunboats the Arkansas succeeded in getting to Vicksburgh under shelter of the batteries there, to appearance much injured. The total Union loss is twenty-seven killed and wounded, and among these are the engineer and pilot of the Tyler. Commodore FARRAGUT'S entire fleet is below Vicksburgh. Slight damage was done to our vessels.

Captain and Assistant-Quartermaster.

THE GUERRILLAS IN KENTUCKY.

MORGAN OVERTAKEN AND DEFEATED.

His Band Scattered---Cannon, Horses and Other Property Recovered.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, July 22.

Reports via Maysville state that our cavalry had overtaken MORGAN'S band on the road to Owensville from Mount Sterling. After an hour and a half's fight, MORGAN'S forces were completely scattered, and the cannon and horses captured by MORGAN at Cynthiana were retaken; as was also a large portion of the stolen property. The rebels lost 25 killed. The National loss is 20 killed.

Defeat of the Guerrillas in Missouri.

HUDSON, Mo., Monday, July 21.

Information has reached here that Col. MCNEIL, with a detachment of National troops, had a fight with PORTER'S gang of guerrillas, near Memphis, Mo., in which the rebels were badly whipped. Our loss was fifteen killed, and thirty wounded and missing. The rebel loss was much greater. Twenty-three of their dead were left on the field. Col. SEATON, a notorious marauder of that section, is among the killed. Col. MCNEIL is still in pursuit of PORTER'S band.

THE FOREIGN ANTI-INTERVENTION MEETING.—The meeting of foreign citizens and others, called for yesterday evening, at the Cooper Institute, was postponed for two weeks, in consequence of the reassuring character of the last news from Europe.

FRANCE AND MEXICO.

NEW ATTITUDE OF THE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT

Mission of Dispatches from Saligny—A Meeting of the Cabinet—A Vigorous War Policy Decided Upon in Regard to Mexico—Immense Fleet Sent into the American Waters.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Tuesday, July 8, 1862.

You will be surprised to find that I again direct your attention to the Mexican question; but in my last I told you that every day brought a change, or at least a new phase of the question worthy of mention. The changes which have taken place within the last few days are more wonderful than all, and I think I can say with certainty, are entitled to your earnest consideration.

For the last fortnight, you will recollect, the Admiral DE LA GRAVIERE and his policy have been in the ascendant, and this policy, it was well known here, was a very essential modification of the one which was adopted when the Convention of Soledad first arrived at Paris. The programme given hastily sent to Gen. LORENCEZ, and recommended to his rapid and energetic execution, avowed boldly, and with an air of pomp which smelt loudly of the age of knight-errantry, that they were going to Mexico on a mission of civilization—on a mission to regenerate the country, and render it a fit associate for the honorable nations of the earth. To accomplish this, it was necessary to march upon the capital, and take and hold it; to depose JUAREZ and put ALMONTE provisionally in his place; to call an election, to be conducted under ALMONTE'S care, for monarchy or no monarchy: and if the monarchy had a majority, to place a King on the throne. Beyond this, circumstances were to dictate the line to follow.

But the French defeat at Puebla, and the representations of Gen. LORENCEZ on the hostile sentiments of the people against France—representations which came to confirm those already made in the same sense by the Admiral DE LA GRAVIERE—forced a change in the programme, and dropped from its provisions the protection of ALMONTE, the election and the monarchy. This policy, which I always maintained the Government would finally adopt, has been in the ascendant, as already stated, and to the knowledge of many people, for a fortnight past, and was entirely confirmed by an article which appeared in the Constitutionnel on Saturday morning last, headed ostentatiously—The new position of France in Mexico. This article concludes in these words: "We pursue in Mexico at this moment two things: a triumph for our arms and a reparation for our legitimate griefs. Nothing more and nothing less."

Notwithstanding the ambiguity of these phrases, notwithstanding the doubt which was left as to the measures which the Government would find necessary to adopt in order to secure these two objects, everyone accepted the Constitutionnel's article as the inauguration of a policy of moderation toward Mexico, and everyone was rejoiced. The article, it was known, was based on the moderate and wise counsels of the French Admiral, and confirmed to the public the belief they had already formed, that the Admiral's counsels predominated in the Government, and were to be followed.

But now, if I am credibly informed, another change has taken place. On Friday last three couriers arrived in Paris from Mexico, one carrying dispatches from M. DE SALIGNY, another from Gen. ALMONTE, and a third from the Pére MIRANDA. Like true old-fashioned conspirators, although working against a common enemy, they each had a particular axe to grind, particular agents through whom to operate, and refused to trust to each other's courier. The dispatch of M. DE SALIGNY, it appears, was a lengthy and able defence of the policy he has always urged in Mexico, and which policy is believed to be the overthrow of President JUAREZ, an armed occupation of the country, a cession of territory to France, and a proclamation in favor of the reconstitution of the Latin races in America.

On Saturday last a Cabinet Council was held a Fontainebleau, under the Presidency of the Emperor, and at which were present Admiral DE LA GRAVIERE and Gen. FOREY. At this meeting the newly-arrived documents referred to above, or such of them as were intended for the Government, were read and considered. As the result of this meeting, if my information is correct, (and the sequel will soon demonstrate the fact,) the policy of M. de Saligny was readopted, and that of M. de la Graviere sent back to the second place. The expedition, therefore, is to assume proportions corresponding to the object in view. Twenty-five thousand instead of eighteen thousand men are to be placed under the command of Gen. Forey, and Admiral de la Graviere will have four instead of one cuirassed frigate under his command. The fleet, in fact, will be most formidable. Instead of waiting till September, these two general officers will start within a fortnight to their posts, and the whole expedition will leave as rapidly as possible. This is said to be the new programme, and the public, probably, will only know of the change of policy by the announcement that the position of the army of Gen. LORENCEZ is so critical that ample reinforcements must be sent to him at once. We shall be able in a very short time to decide on the truth of this change.

But it has been suggested to me that this expedition is out of all proportion to the wants of the service, and that it has been increased in size in order to be ready for any eventualities that may arise in the United States. M. DE PERSIGNY, who was at Saturday's council for the first time since his return from England, and who came home so thoroughly secessionist, it is said, as to recommend boldly and without hesitation to the Emperor a recognition of the South, favored the increase of the expedition, and laid down the theory that the North was so tired of the war, and so far away from the end they had set out to attain, that if France, with a formidable force in Mexican waters as a menace, would recognize the South, the North would seize this as a pretext to voluntarily relax the blockade so far as to allow the exit of cotton, and perhaps even to make peace with the South.

Now, although it is almost impossible that so sensible a man as M. DE PERSIGNY could advocate such an insensate policy, it is yet a fact that the four principal organs which the Government controls—the Moniteur, the Constitutionnel, the Patrie, and the Pays—have recommenced, by order, the preparation of the public mind for unlooked-for events in America. The Moniteur talks, for the first time, but in a mild way, of the slow progress of the Union arms, and of the probable impossibility of subjugating the South; the Patrie has taken up the mediation question again, and treats the question laboriously, and with its usual want of truth; the Constitutionnel, the especial organ of M. DE PERSIGNY, fairly boils over with malignity, falsehood, and unfair citations; the Pays follows in the wake of the Constitutionnel, of which it is only an appendage, and from which it differs only in its greater ignorance of the questions it treats.

Now it may be that the French Government has come to the conclusion that the Government of the United States is weak and exhausted, and that, while professing to be neutral, they can bully us through their official and semi-official journals—for here, where the Press is a responsible agent, it is quite another thing from the Press in England or the United States—and that by the menaces of their Press, or by a recognition of the South they can manage to open the cotton ports; but I do not believe that they have gone further than to fix upon this as an eventuality that may arrive in the future, and for which their fleet and army in Mexico will be ready in case of need. I have never believed, for a moment, that there was any danger of the intervention of France between the two contending sections in the United States, and find it difficult now to admit that the Emperor and M. THOUVENEL have any idea of an intervention; but M. DE PERSIGNY'S known hostility to the North, taken in connection with the singular manner in which he is trying for a few days past to shape public opinion through the Press, and the change of programme in Mexico, if this latter should turn out true, are sufficient to create uneasiness and to put one on the alert. It is hardly possible that the Minister of the Interior would show such an active zeal all at once in the direction of the Press on Mexican matters, if it were not to conform to a programme of the Government.

I hope to be able to give you more positive details in my next on this important subject.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

How New-Jersey Provides for Her Sick Soldiers.

While New-York has been multiplying hospitals for her sick and wounded volunteers, our neighbors of New-Jersey have not been behind in this work of patriotic benevolence. Beside the State Hospital at Newark, they have now at Jersey City a hospital established by private enterprise, inferior to none in the substantial necessities of comfort and attention provided for the disabled soldiers of New-Jersey, to whom its doors are at all times freely opened. Four hundred and eighty-six have thus far experienced its attentions since its establishment on the 23d of last April, and the fact that of this number but four have died, best tells the story of the care the patients receive. Everything that thoughtful kindness can provide is at their disposal, and those loving attentions, such as no money can purchase, are freely tendered by the warm-hearted ladies of Jersey City, who have taken this institution under their especial charge, through the Ladies' Relief Association, two members of which attend at the hospital each day to lend their aid in caring for its inmates.

The Association also sees to it that garments and other comforts are provided for the sick, in addition to the necessaries which are provided by the State. From all parts of New-Jersey freewill offerings are received continually, and nothing is wanting for the patients that can be furnished to them with safety. Fruits in their seasons are supplied in abundance, cooling creams and other luxuries, and a generous-hearted florist supplies fragrant flowers from his gardens as they are desired, while other tradesmen have been equally generous in their donations of milk and other articles.

Medical attendance is supplied by the gratuitous services of the physicians of Jersey City, Drs. ALCORN COX, and Dr. LUDKINS and Dr. VARICK, being daily in attendance, and others lending assistance as it is needed. To Ex-Mayor VAN VOAST, the institution is most of all indebted. From its commencement he has been unwearied in his attentions, giving to it freely of his time and means, personally supervising the details of its management, and only now relaxing his exertions while called away to the State Capital on the kindred work of raising new recruits for our depleted army.

This hospital was first established in Jersey City, on the corner of Erie and 4th streets, removing, on the 1st of July to the more pleasant quarters it now occupies at No. 136 Hudson-street. Here convenient access is had from the railroad near by, and from the dock, which comes nearly up to the rear of the building, on the North River. It overlooks the river, from which cooling breezes come to furnish abundant ventilation, which the construction of the building favors. It is a brick edifice of four stories, the first being occupied as a ward for transient visitors, the second reserved for the wounded, and the third for the sick, the fourth being used as a kitchen and store-room. A fall and tackle in one corner of the building furnishes convenient means for conveying patients and heavy articles above stairs.

A building on each side is also at the disposal of the hospital, in case additional accommodations are needed. Ninety beds are now provided, which have thus far proved abundant, the largest number of patients at any one time being considerably less than this. At present there are some twenty or thirty under treatment, among them wounded men from Williamsburgh, from Fair Oaks, from Gaines' Mill, and one poor fellow, who was wounded as his regiment was about to leave for Washington with the first volunteers, and who has been for fourteen months under medical treatment. Among the sick is one man of fifty, who has seen his share of service in the Peninsula, though exempt by law, and the father of eleven children. The patients are nearly all in the best of heart and spirits, and with or without reason express unabated confidence in Gen. MCCLELLAN, and desire to again enter the service at an early a day as possible.

The regular nurses of the hospital are Mrs. LEE and Mrs. WILSON, who have three female and two male assistants, besides an "intelligent contraband." The Superintendent is Mr. GROFF, who is assisted by a book-keeper.

Christian Brothers' Academy, Brooklyn.

DISTRIBUTION OF PREMIUMS.

The Annual Distribution of Premiums at the Christian Brothers' Academy, Jay-street, Brooklyn, took place on Monday, 21st inst., in presence of a large and highly appreciative auditory, composed of clergymen, parents, friends and patrons of the Academy. The large school-room was crowded to excess, and the audience appeared not only to take a deep interest in the proceedings, but by their loud and prolonged approbation at the delivery of patriotic speeches, evinced their true sentiments on the question of the Union. Among the numerous clergymen present we noticed the Rev. Messrs. TURNER, V. G., FARRELL, KEEGAN, and MAGUIRE. The "Green immortal" banner of old Ireland waved in unison with the glorious Stars and Stripes. A band composed of twenty-five of the students, dressed in a neat and becoming uniform discoursed sweet music during the evening, consisting of National and Irish airs.

The exercises were deeply interesting, and consisted of declamations, dialogues and well-selected morceaux of music, both vocal and instrumental. The proceedings opened by the band playing LAMBILLOTTE'S sacred canticle—accompanied by the pupils in full chorus. This was followed by a soul-inspiring and spirit-stirring recitative appeal—"To Arms,"—in which we were told that the foremost in the field would win the laurels. The young orator was greatly applauded, and the appeal was well-timed, and showed the feeling of the audience on the present urgent demand for reinforcements in the field. The "Rival Speakers" was a humorous dialogue, which created much merriment among the audience.

The speeches on the "Union," "Vindication," and "Plea for the Union," were admirably delivered—especially the last.

After the distribution of premiums by Rev. Mr. TURNER, he addressed a few remarks to the Professor of Music on the manner in which his pupils had acquitted themselves; he also complimented the Brothers for the great proficiency which the students had made in the various departments of education.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

THE POLICE AMONG THE LIQUOR DEALERS.—The Police throughout the City are very actively engaged in making arrests of persons who are found guilty of violating the law in regard to the sale of liquors without a license. Over six hundred of this class of offenders have been brought to the Jefferson Market Police Court within the last three days. As a general thing they have given bail in the sum of $100, to answer whatever indictment may be found against them by the Grand Jury. In the other Police Courts of the City, many parties, for this offence, have also been disposed of. The Police Justices all say that they are determined to discharge their duty in reference to this class of cases, and that they will do all they can to induce liquor-dealers to take out a license.

EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The Board of Excise Commissioners held their forty-sixth meeting yesterday, and granted 272 licenses, which had been passed upon by the President during the recess. The Board will meet again on Friday.

AN HONORABLE CLAIM TO ASSISTANCE.—Mr. SAMUEL PIGGOTT, a Union man, who was driven away from Western Virginia last year, and all his property destroyed, was enabled by the kindness of sympathetic friends to establish a small jewelry establishment at No. 643 Eighth-avenue. Last week his little place was seriously damaged by fire; the insurance was wholly inadequate, and the unfortunate man is a second time a just claimant for aid. Any who care to aid in the premises, can do so by leaving their custom at the above place, where Mr. PIGGOTT is again attempting business.

A CASE APPEALING TO CHARITY.—Mr. CYRUS PECK, who lost his life by the falling of a scaffold, on Monday, the 21st inst., leaves a wife and five children, heretofore dependent upon him for support. His eldest son, a young boy, about 16 years of age, who was on the scaffold at the time, is so seriously injured that his recovery is doubtful. Donations left with his widow, at No. 298 Second-street, will be well deserved, and, we have no doubt, gratefully received.

STAMPS, AND HOW THEY GO.—At the City Post-office there were sold, yesterday, $20,000 worth of the regular issue of postage stamps. The new currency, though not absolutely legal till the 1st of August, has already become the circulating medium for all sums less than fifty cents.

NEW-YORK UNIVERSITY REPORT.—From the Regents of the University is issued the Seventy-fifth Annual Report. In it they show that during the year 1861 the aggregate number of students in general literature and science in the two hundred and twenty-six academical institutions) visited by the Regents was one thousand seven hundred and fifteen, more than during any previous collegiate year. The number of medical students was but six hundred and sixty-nine, the southerners having returned home in consequence of the war. The Regents have, during the year, appropriated about $75,500 for the purchase of books and apparatus.

NON-INTERVENTION MEETING.—The foreign residents, who from time to time have expended money and labor in the preliminary stages of a protestant gathering against intervention by foreign Powers, failed to meet last night as was expected. When it is next announced, we will announce the announcement.

GEN. T. F. MEAGHER.—This patriot soldier and scholar will be the recipient of a popular demonstration this evening at WALLACK'S Theatre. With such of his Staff as are with him, he will attend the performances at that house, which will be elegantly decorated for the occasion. That the boys will fail to improve the opportunity by calling for a "speech," "speech," is one of the impossibilities of our age and country and people.

NEW STEAMER.—The Norwich and Worcester Line, under the efficient management of Mr. E. L. MARTIN, has added a new steamer to their list. It is called the City of Norwich, and with a few improvements is built on the model of her mates, the City of Boston, Capt. WILLIAMS, and the City of New-York, Capt. JEWETT. She is a beauty, and the Connecticut city of Norwich may well feel proud of her.

THE BREWERS, AND HOW THEY BREWED.—Yesterday afternoon the brewers held a meeting at the Astor House. The brewing interest was well represented, and various matters informally discussed, when Mr. AMMERMAN called the meeting to order, and nominated Mr. M. J. READ as Chairman, To that responsible position Mr. M. J. READ was duly and unanimously chosen, whereupon Mr. AMMERMAN aforesaid moved that the reporters be requested to leave the room. The brewers en masse did not see the necessity of the motion, and it was not carried. Mr. M. J. READ then of his individual motion desired the reporters to vamose, which they did, and therefore the doings of the great brewing interest must remain veiled and shrouded from the public vision.

THE TURF.

The Boston Race Meeting.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Monday, July 21, 1862.

To-morrow the Boston Summer Meeting commences on the Franklin Park Course, distant about six miles from the city. The prospects of a successful meeting are very flattering. The whole amount of the various purses offered, exceeding $4,000, has already been subscribed by the patrons of the turf here, and the thoroughbreds in the various stables are all in the highest possible condition. Hon. ZEB. WARD has been obliged to return home to Lexington, Ky., on account of the proximity of the rebel guerrilla chief, JOHN MORGAN, in his locality; and the warm Union principles of Mr. WARD rendering him highly obnoxious to the rebel party, his presence at home, to defend and protect his own property, was indispensable. All his horses, however, remain here to run their various engagements, and are in charge of Dr. ROBERT UNDERWOOD.

To-morrow, (Tuesday,) there are three races on the programme. The first is for three year olds, mile heats, for a purse of $300, and for which the following horses are entered: JOHN HUNTER'S br. c. Sunshine; P. C. BUSH'S ch. f. Aerolite and ZEB WARD'S b. filly by Lexington. The second race is a handicap for a purse of $600; single dash of four miles, the second horse to save his entrance money. For this, CHARLES S. LLOYD has entered Throg's Neck and Avalanche; ZEB WARD, Reporter, and Dr. WELDON, Bettie Ward. This will prove a good race, and is the first four mile race yet run in the season's racing campaign. The third race is for a purse of $400, handicap, mile heats, best three in five. Hillsborough, an imported four year old colt by Stockwell, Avalanche, Throg's Neck and Laura Farris, are the entries.

The sport on the first day will consequently prove highly interesting, and as this is the first race meeting ever held in Boston, there is a great degree of interest felt among the citizens. The complete failure of the meeting in New-York also adds considerably to the general feeling expressed to make the Boston meeting a decided success, and thus take that lead in sporting matters hitherto enjoyed by the Empire City. As an instance of the interest felt, we may state that one warm patron of the turf in this city has alone taken on this own account 90 of the $10 badges of the meeting. Mr. CASSADY is in high spirits at the bright prospect, and fully anticipates realizing sufficient from this meeting to cover his losses at Philadelphia and New-York.

The meeting of Idlewild and Wagram, in the three mile heat race on Thursday, will, it is anticipated, prove highly exciting. Wagram was purchased of Mr. CLAY, of Kentucky, by Mr. D. ROBINS, of this City, after his winning the two mile heat race at New-York, and his new owner is resolved to measure his strength against the renowned daughter of Lexington. Both are in famous condition, the track, notwithstanding the heavy rain of Sunday, good, and a capital race confidently expected.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

BOSTON, Tuesday, July 22.

The first day's racing came off to-day on the Franklin Park Trotting Course. Over 3,000 spectators were present, comprising the élite of this city and vicinity. The racing was of a very superior character, Northern horses winning every race, and the favorites being defeated in every instance.

The three-year-old race for a purse of $300, mile heats, was won by Mr. HUNTER'S Sunshine, beating Aerolite and the Lexington Filly, in 1:54 and 1:53¾.

The handicap race, four-mile dash, for a purse of $600, was won by Mr. MORRIS' Throgs Neck, beating Reporter and Bettie Ward, in 7:34½.

The handicap mile-heat race, for a purse of $400, was won by Mr. MORRIS' Avalanche, beating Hillsborough. The latter won the first heat in 2:02, and Avalanche the next three heats, in 1:52½, 1:56 and 1:52. Each heat was closely contested.

The meeting promises to be highly successful.

New-Jersey.

THE RIOT AT SALTERSVILLE.—It was stated in some of the morning papers yesterday, that a party of firemen belonging to Engine Co. No. 21, of New-York, were engaged in a fight with a German pic-nic party at Saltersville. No men belonging to Engine Company No. 21, we are assured, were engaged in the disturbance.

A SOLDIER'S BURYING-GROUND.—At the meeting of the Jersey City Common Council last evening the Special Committee appointed for the purpose reported that they had selected a plot of ground at New-York Bay Cemetery for the burial of soldiers, and offered a resolution that an appropriation be made for inclosing it with a hedge fence, and for the erection of a suitable monument. The report was received and the resolution adopted.

ARMY AND NAVY INTELLIGENCE.

There has just been a species of mutiny on Governor's Island. The majority of the paroled soldiers, or "Texans," as they are commonly called, formerly belonging to the First, Third and Eighth Regiments, (Regulars,) but now attached to the general service at Fort Columbus, have laid down their arms and refuse to do any duty except that usually performed by the ordinary camp or garrison police. The cause of this refusal is a conviction among the men that they have been violating their parole by doing guard duty at a post where Southern prisoners were confined. It is not known what will be done with those men who have laid down their arms. They are still at large, and will probably be allowed to remain so until they are exchanged or discharged.

The year's work at the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy-yard was as follows:

The following is the latest location of the United States vessels named: Pulaski at Montevido, June 20; the Sonoma at Fortress Monroe, July 19, (just arrived from Portsmouth;) the Mississippi, Pensacola, Cayuga and Itasco, were at New-Orleans when the Montgomery left that city. The Cayuga had just arrived.

The United States steam gunboat Penguin, destined for the reinforcement of the James River flotilla, was put formally in commission yesterday. She is commanded by Capt. WILLIAMSON, for a long period the popular executive officer of the liner North Carolina, at the Brooklyn Navy-yard.

The Carondelet, whose encounter with the rebel ram Arkansas has been published, is a regular ironclad navy-built gunboat, built for the War Department, through Gen. FREMONT, at Carondelet some months since. She was designed by Mr. POOK, naval constructor. She is 175 feet long, 51½ feet wide and 6 feet deep. She carries 16 guns and about 150 men. The hull and upper portion of the boat is plated with 2½-inch iron. She cost $89,000. Congress recently authorized her transfer to the Navy Department.

Mental Depression.

It has often been remarked that no one can minister to a mind diseased, but a mind diseased is frequently only the consequence of disordered digestion, and naturally finds relief when the process of nutrition is restored to a healthful state. The PERUVIAN SYRUP removes the morbid condition of the stomach, quickens the circulation, increases the insensible perspiration and consequently relieves the mind from the causes of its depression. Sold by all druggists.

Dr. Lighthill has succeeded in completely restoring my hearing, which was seriously impaired, although previous to applying to him I was treated by several physicians without the least benefit. Any further information I should be pleased to render on application to me at my residence, No. 173 2d-st., Brooklyn, E. D., or at my place of business, No. 740 Water-st.

L. Goodheim, Esq., No. 5 Barclay-st., having been troubled with incessant and most distressing noises in the head, and almost total deafness in one ear, was completely cured by Dr. Lighthill, after his case had been unsuccessfully treated by several physicians of this City.

METROPOLITAN HOTEL,
NEW-YORK, 1st April, 1862.

DEAR SIR: I take much pleasure in testifying to the professional skill exhibited by you in your treatment of a case of severe inflammation of the throat and ear with which I have lately been afflicted. Upon coming under your charge I was immediately relieved, and speedily cured of a most aggravated complaint, which several physicians had previously sought in vain to mitigate.

As I am somewhat of a stranger in the City, I would state that you are at liberty to substantiate my statements, if necessary, by reference to my relatives, Mr. A. V. Stout, President of the Shoe and Leather Bank of New-York, and to Mr. Everett Clapp, of the Western Transportation Company, No. 1 Coenties-slip.

With much esteem, I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
FRED. M. HANKS.

No. 42 FIFTH-STREET,

Dr. Lighthill:

DEAR SIR: I take pleasure in testifying to the remarkable skill and judgment you displayed in the case of my daughter, who had been partially deaf, accompanied by discharge from the ears since early infancy, and is now, thanks to your treatment, able to hear as well as any one, while her ears are free from the discharge. Although it is nearly two years since she has been under your care, her hearing remains as good and her ears as sound as the day she left you.

COURT REPORTS.

Conditional Purchase—Two Opinions Rendered concerning a Propeller Wheel.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge McCarthy.

James L. Jackson and Peter R. Jackson vs. Peter Crary.—This action was brought to recover the value of a propeller wheel, known as the "Campbell Wheel." The plaintiffs claimed to recover, as the assignees of the claim of Robert E. Campbell, against the defendant. They alleged that, on the 5th day of March, 1862, Campbell, who owned the patent right on the wheel, sold and delivered the wheel to the defendant, to be used on the John S. Williams, and to be paid for if it suited the defendant, and on the further condition that if the wheel was broken while in such use, it was to be paid for in any event. It was claimed, on the contrary, that the wheel was made on the order of Stanton & Mallory, of Newburgh, who had the contract for the steam engine and machinery for the boat; and, also, that Campbell represented that his wheel would propel a boat ten per cent. faster than any other wheel in use—that in fact it failed to do its work as represented. It appeared, in proof, that the wheel was delivered in March, and that it was used on the propeller until the latter part of May, 1862, when, being broken, it was taken out, and Campbell notified that his wheel was ready to be surrendered to him.

Evidence was given also to show that the wheel went ten per cent faster than any other wheel, inasmuch as a certain Philadelphia wheel with which the Campbell wheel was replaced made better time. On the contrary, evidence was introduced to show that the reasons for the discrepancy in speed was owing to a want of capacity in the engineer to keep up a maximum and uniform pressure of steam.

The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for $348 73.

E. W. Dodge for plaintiff; Charles N. Black for defendant.

Decisions.

Goodyear vs. Ladd, 4c.—Motion granted on payment of $10 costs.

Frances M. Healy vs. Jeremiah Healy.—Report confirmed, and judgment of divorce granted.

Late News from Richmond.

From the Washington Star, Saturday.

A free colored man, who was impressed into the Confederate service in Virginia on the breaking out of the rebellion, and has been lately in the immediate employ of Gen. LONGSTREET, has reached Washington, having escaped from Richmond during the confusion there following upon the late battles. He is really of the "intelligent" order we so much read about, having been to Liberia and to other points, where he has been placed in positions of trust. He states that the rebel loss in killed, wounded and missing, in the seven days' battles, is admitted at Richmond to amount to 22,000.

The Confederate army numbered in the neighborhood of 250,000. The fact of the close conscription amounts sufficiently for their being able to gather so large a force. In fact all the men liable to military duty are in the ranks, except such as got substitutes from Maryland, or from those over or under the legal age. Numbers of the Confederate wounded brought into Richmond were the merest boys.

The Confederates are desperate in view of the fact that their present army cannot be replaced, having utterly exhausted the fighting material of the South.

Not only the whites, but the blacks of the country have been swept into the Confederate ranks, (the latter for laboring purposes,) and consequently the grain crops are in many places wasting in the fields for want of hands to harvest them.

The stampedes of slaves toward the North star has crippled the harvesting operations. In the vicinity of Fredericksburgh the contrabands in leaving, have helped themselves not only to their own freedom, but have left their masters minus everything in the shape of horses and carriages that would facilitate their movements. There are considerable quantities of old wheat on hand yet throughout Virginia.

Considerable hay has been raised this year in Virginia, but little or no corn has been planted.

The able-bodied whites of the South having been exhausted by the conscription, the Confederates seriously talk of arming the negroes. They seem to put faith in the fidelity of the negroes, or their own ability to make them faithful, but seem doubtful if the negroes, from their entire unacquaintance with firearms, will acquire any facility in their use.

Gen. EWELL was severely wounded in the neck at the Richmond battles. Gen. JOE JOHNSTON had experienced a relapse from undertaking to get out too soon, and mortification of his wound was feared.

JAMES BARBOUR has been an active aid to Gen. EWELL, and JOHN S. BARBOUR (President of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad) aid to Gen. JOHNSTON.

TEAS—Are in request, and quite stiffly held.

TIN—Has been less active, but quoted firm.

TALLOW—Sales, 130,000 lbs., at 10¾c.@10¾c. ₱ lb. The business of the week, Messrs. KNIGHT & SONS notice thus: The demand for this staple has been very large, and owing to the small stock now held here, and the large quantity required to fill contracts made the grst of the month, has caused the market to keep firm, and sales have been made at 10½c. for Prime Eastern and Western lots in hhds.; Prime City brands are held at 10¾c., and Butchers' Association has advanced to 11c. The Continental and European demand have both been large, notwithstanding the high rates of freight demanded, which has been counteracted by the extreme high rates of Sterling Exchange. Orders for the West Indies market continue about the same. At the close we quote the market very firm for all kinds, and owing to the advance in Rough Tallow to 6½c., prices have an upward tendency. Price this day, 1858, 9¼c.; 1859, 11c.; 1860, 10¾c.; 1861, 8¾c. ₱ lb.

WHISKY—Sales 600 bbls., at 30c.@30½c. ₱ gallon.

The Detroit Advertiser of the 20th inst. says: The market, since our last weekly report, has stiffened up, and the range now may be stated at 40c.@48c. There are buyers for large lots, at 48c. for best; but for light lots, 45c.@46c. is nearly or quite the top of the market. The advance is occasioned mainly by the movements of those who had previously kept out of the market, but who now prefer to purchase rather than accept the alternative of taking their money back home. There is now but little left.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

DR. COBBETT, MEMBER OF THE N. Y. University, (Medical College,) and Royal College of Surgeons, London, has removed from No. 19 Duane-st., to his present very convenient suite of offices at No. 20 Centre-st., between Chambers and Reade sts., with a private entrance at No. 6 City Hall-place, where he can be consulted with the most honorable confidence on all diseases affecting the urinary organs; thirty years in his present specialty, (three of which have been at the Hospitals of this City,) enable him to guarantee a cure in every case undertaken, or make no charge. Strictures of the urethra, impotency, seminal weaknesses, &c., treated on the most scientific principles. N. B.—As a proof of Dr. C.'s qualifications, he would call attention to his Diplomas, which can be seen in his office.

The victims of misplaced confidence, who have been misled by quack advertisements, can call on Dr. C. with the certainty of being radically cured. N. B.—Dr. C. is a qualified physician and surgeon, and a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New-York. Office hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

THE BATTLE OF MINISINK.

The Eighty-Third Anniversary of the Battle Celebrated.

Another Monument Erected in Goshen in Honor of the Minisink Heroes---Large Assemblage of Sons of Orange and Sullivan.

A Procession, Oration, Speeches of Welcome, &c.

Yesterday was a memorable day at Goshen, Orange County, N. Y. It was the anniversary of the battle of Minisink, and likewise the occasion of the dedication of a new monument which has just been completed in honor of the heroes who fell in that sanguinary engagement. The citizens of Orange, Sullivan, Ulster and Rockland Counties, as well as the Sons of Orange and Sullivan from all parts of the State, attended in large numbers. Special trains on the Erie Railroad brought in each full delegations—the fairer sex by no means in the minority. New-York City was represented in the Orator of the Day, John C. Dimmick, Esq., Councilmen Lent, Frank Horton, and others of equal note. There were four fire companies from Middletown, four from Port Jervis, four from Walden, and one from Montgomery. One of the features of the day was the presence of a bevy of young girls, representing the States of the Union, with two or three extra ones in anticipation of any addition of States that may be made. Each carried a badge with the inscription—

DEER PARK,
1862.

All were clad in spotless white, with wreaths and gay streamers of the National colors. They enlivened the day with the singing of patriotic airs. They were accompanied by a company of twenty-five juvenile Zouaves, also from Deer Park, armed with imitation muskets, and attired in the gay uniform of the "Zou-Zou." The boys and girls were under the charge of Col. Hoyer, Dr. Lawrence, Geo. Morford and Wm. Adams. They came from Port Jervis, in a special train of nine cars, and carried off the lion's share of the attraction. They constituted the principal feature of the Port Jervis Fourth of July celebration, and the citizens of that locality may well be proud of them.

The ceremonies of the day commenced with the procession, in the following order:

ORDER OF PROCESSION.

1. Marshal and Aids.
2. Goshen Cornet Band and others.
3. Relatives of those who fell in the battle.
4. Relatives and Executors of the Will of the late Meredit H. Cash.
5. The Artist.
6. Supervisors of the County.
7. Orange County Medical Society.
8. Committee of Arrangements and other Committees.
9. Committee of Reception.
10. Committee of Orange and Sullivan residing in New-York City.
11. Sons of Orange and Sullivan residing in New-York City.
12. Guests, specially invited.
13. Masonic and Odd Fellows Societies.
14. S. C. Parmenter and Staff, and the Military Companies.
15. Fire Companies of the County of Orange.
16. Citizens generally.

Gen. Wm. C. Little was the Marshal of the day, and to him the people are probably indebted for the ample opportunities offered for viewing the procession in all its parts—detached and conjointed, in the Park, through the streets, back in the Park, through the streets, and then back in the Park again. The exhibition was, however, rather calculated to delay the literary portion of the exercises, which, instead of commencing at 10½ A. M., did not begin until nearly 1 P. M. The meeting was organized as follows:

President—Joseph Davis.

Vice-Presidents—Horace W. Elliott, Goshen; James Durland, Chester; Robert Denniston, Blooming Grove; Oliver Thompson, Hamptonburgh; Wm. F. Wheeler, Warwick; Samuel Webb, Monroe; James P. Adams, Cornwall; Danl. B. St. John, Newburgh; Gideon Felton, Montgomery; Alexander Thompson, Crawford; Danl. C. Wisner, Walkill; Wm. S. Little, Mount Hope; Stephen St. John, Deer Park; Jonathan Wood, Greenville; Wm. Evans, Minisink; Gideon W. Cock, Wanayander; James Patten, New-Windsor; Henry Pearson.

Secretaries—John H. Thompson, Edward M. Madden.

The visiting firemen were welcomed in a neat address by Mr. Champion, of Goshen Cataract Engine Company No. 1, who briefly alluded to the interest of the occasion, and invited his brother firemen to partake of their hospitalities at the Court-house.

After prayer by Rev. Dr. Potts, the sons of Orange and Sullivan were welcomed by David F. Gedney, of Orange County. Mr. A. S. Van Duser, of New-York, responded appropriately.

After music by the bands, which enlivened the occasion with many patriotic airs, the orator of the day, John C. Dimmick, Esq., of New-York, was introduced, and spoke long, earnestly and eloquently. He recounted the history of the battle of Minisink and the sacrifices of the noble men who participated in the engagement, and gave up their lives in defence of their homes and friends. He drew a thrilling contrast between the Revolution of '76 and the rebellion of '62, showing how that our forefathers had every reason to complain, and that the rebels have not the smallest ground for dissatisfaction. His address, such as was heard by the rather migratory audience, was well received.

The day passed off without any incident to mar the general harmony. Even the two policemen detailed for duty on this extra occasion found little to do, and no occasion to regret that their two confrères—the balance of the four which Goshen boasts—were released from duty in order to "tend store," such is the moral good repute of the citizens of Orange and vicinity. The refreshment booths, the show, and the fair for wounded soldiers, all did a good business, and the vast crowd went home well pleased with the day's pleasure.

It is now eighty-three years since the occurrence to the engagement in which the heroes of Minisink fell. On the 22d of July, 1779, a band of Indians and Tories, under the savage Indian warrior Brant, made an encroachment on the settlements of Sullivan and Orange Counties, burning dwellings, murdering the defenceless inhabitants, and doing other acts of rapine and slaughter. They were first seen in Sullivan County, upon the the banks of the Delaware, near what is now the town of Lumberland—then nearly an unbroken wilderness. They had sent forward their plunder to a ford on the Delaware, near the mouth of the Lackanack, and Col. Tusten, with about one hundred and thirty men, raised on the spur of the moment, undertook to cut them off from their spoils. The shrewd Indian, however, deviated from his expected course, cut off about fifty of our men from the main body, and surrounded the remaining eighty on a high table land, thickly covered with rocks, bushes and trees, about three-fourths of a mile from the river. The eighty, however, held their ground manfully against about five times their number, from ten in the morning until late in the afternoon. But half of them were either killed or wounded, and the ammunition of the balance gave out. Col. Tusten, who was a skillful surgeon, had collected seventeen wounded in what he supposed was a secure place, and was engaged in attending them when the savages overcame his wearied men, and rushed to the brutal work of the scalping knife. All who were able were obliged to flee, and no less than 44 fell victims to the merciless foe. Among those who were ruthlessly sacrificed was the brave leader of our little band, Col. Tusten. For forty-three years the bones of the victims lay neglected on this almost trackless wild. Several attempts were made to collect them, but difficulties intervened, and it was not until 1822 that the object was affected. On July 28 of that year, the bones, 300 in number, were placed in two coffins, and deposited in the church-yard of the Presbyterian Church at Goshen, Orange County, and a monument of no small size erected, inscribed:

"Sacred to the Memory of
Forty-four of their Fellow-Citizens,
Who fell at the Battle of Minisink,
July 22, 1779."

The laying of the corner-stone was signalized with appropriate ceremonies—Gen. Hathorn officiating. An address was delivered by Rev. Jos. R. Wilson, and it was said to be the largest gathering ever convened in the country.

The lapse of forty years, however, led to the decay of this memorial, and it became necessary to erect another.

The late Dr. Meredit H. Cash, of Orange County, promoted by patriotism, bequeathed at his death, about two years since, the sum of $3,000 for the erection of a new monument, which has just been completed, and was dedicated yesterday with appropriate ceremonies—exactly forty-three years after the erection of the first monument, and as already stated, eighty-three years after the battle which it commemorates—so do they still live who die for their country.

The new monument bears the following inscription:

"In memory of the patriots who fell at the battle of Minisink, on the 22d day of July, 1779." Col. Benj. Tusten, Capt. Bagaled Tyler, Capt. Samuel Jones, Capt. John Little, Capt. John Duncan, Capt. Benjamin Vail, Lieut. John Wood, Adjt. Nathaniel French, Ensign Ephraim Masting, Ephraim Middaugh, Gabriel Wisner, Stephen Mead, Matthias Terwliger, Joshua Lockwood, Ephraim Ferguson, Roger Townsend, Samuel Knapp, Jas. B. Bennett, Wm. Barker, Jonathan Pierce, James Little, Joseph Morris, Gilbert F. Vail, Abraham Shepherd, Joel Decker, Nathan Wade, Simon Walt, Tallmadge, Jacob Dunning, John Carpenter, David Barney, Jonathan Haskell, Abraham Williams, James Mosher, Isaac Ward, Baltiers Nierpas, Carmichael Bailey, More Thomas, Eleazer Owens, Adam Enlker, Benjamin Dunnige, David Reed.

On another side is the following:

"This monument was erected by the noble munificence of Meredit H. Cash, M. D., a citizen of Orange, now deceased. Dr. Cash was distinguished for his eminent public services, and greatly esteemed for the virtues which adorned his private life. Let his name be honored and his memory cherished while this column stands to attest his patriotic liberality."

The design was, according to the terms of the will of Dr. Cash, selected by the Board of Supervisors of the county. It represents a monument of Italian marble, 32 feet high, exclusive of base. The lower base is of granite, 7½ feet square, upon which is a marble base 5½ feet square. On this marble base rests a die 4½ feet in height, upon the sides of which, in bass relief, is a representation of the battle, or more properly the massacre of Minisink, also the names of the slain, and inscription to the donor noticed above. The cap on the die is 1½ feet in height and 5½ feet in width, and has upon each corner a spread eagle. Sitting between the eagles, and immediately in front of the shaft, is a figure representing the Goddess of Liberty, holding in one hand a wreath, while the other hand rests on a National shield. Over the head are the words, "They still live." The shaft is square and is 12½ feet high. It has upon its front the National symbols, and is surmounted by a pedestal of two feet, on the top of which is a figure of Hope, five feet high, and a prophetic finger pointing ever heavenward. The sculpture is well done. The design and execution are by Mr. John Vanderpool, of New-York City.

Among those present at the celebration was Mrs. Mitchell, 83 years of age, a daughter of Capt. Tyler, one of the martyrs to whose memory the monument is erected.

Major Carpenter, the only surviving member of the Committee of Arrangements for dedicating the old monument, 40 years ago, was also present on the stand.

To Charles H. Winfield, Esq., A. S. Cassidy, Esq., and J. J. McNally, Esq., the members of the Press are indebted for timely aid in the discharge of their duties.

THE NEW CALL FOR TROOPS.

RECRUITING IN THE CITY.

THE UNITED STATES MUSTERING OFFICE.

A greater number of recruits were examined and mustered into the service of the United States at the mustering office, yesterday, than at any time since the issuing of the President's last call. Daily the number is increasing; the examining officers, who are never absent from their posts throughout the day, are kept constantly engaged. Dr. Mott states that appearances are most encouraging. The Empire State will soon have her quota of troops in the field.

THE QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

Quartermasters have been appointed for the various military districts throughout the State—thirty-two in number—and are now having distributed to them uniforms and accoutrements, to be furnished to recruits on enlistment. This arrangement, it is supposed, will greatly facilitate matters, as they enable commanders of companies to attend to other duties besides that of making requisition for a single uniform to the Quartermaster-General, thereby saving much valuable time.

VISIT OF RECRUITING OFFICERS TO THE MAYOR.

Yesterday morning, the Committee appointed last Saturday at the meeting of Recruiting Officers, held at the Astor House, met. Capt. W. W. Badger was in the chair, and Lieut. Rodd elected Secretary. It was proposed, and adopted, that Capt. Doherty be added to the Committee. A deputation, consisting of the Chairman, Capts. Paterson, Bowles, Doherty, Murphy, Phelan, and Lieut. Rodd was appointed to wait upon the Mayor, and obtain his views of the resolutions passed at the meeting on Saturday.

His Honor said that he had laid a copy of the resolutions before the Common Council, and he was of opinion that some course should be taken to reimburse Recruiting Officers for the outlay made in raising companies. He would bring the subject before the Sixth Senatorial District Committee, of which he was a member, at the next meeting. Also he was fully aware of the disadvantages Recruiting Officers labored under, and thought that the facts should be laid before the Governor of the State by the various Committees or the City.

The deputation then withdrew. When the next meeting is to take place will be duly announced to the members of the Recruiting Officers' Committee.

THE STANTON LEGION.

This regiment, commanded by Col. W. H. Allen, is now encamped at New-Dorp, Staten Island, and the various companies are fast filling up. The executive officers of the regiment have been appointed, and a recruit can be inspected, mustered into service, uniformed and sent to camp in a few hours. The various recruiting offices send their men to headquarters, No. 174 Grand-street, daily, at 4 o'clock, from which place they are at that hour sent to camp. A regimental band is in attendance.

THE IRISH BRIGADE.

Col. Robert Emmet Patterson's Regiment of Gen. Meagher's Irish Brigade is said to have left Harrisburgh, Pennsylvania, for the James River. The condition of the New-York Regiments of the Brigade, after the seven days' fighting before Richmond, is as follows: The Sixty-ninth, Col. Robert Nugent, which originally mustered 800, is now, by the casualties of war, reduced to an effective force of 295; the Eighty-eighth, Lieut.-Col. Kelly, commanding, musters 350; the Sixty-third, Col. John Burke, has, however, 500 men fit for duty; this regiment, from the fact of forming the reserve of the Brigade, having escaped some of the heavier losses from which the other corps suffered. Gen. Meagher speaks in the most enthusiastic and affectionate terms of his brigade, both officers and men. He claims for them that, with half a dozen exceptions, unworthy of mention, they did their duty with the steadiness of trained old soldiers, and with all the daring and brilliant fearlessness of Cavaliers. The Irish American says: "Gen. Meagher, we learn, will leave for headquarters within the next ten days, if not sooner recalled by telegraph. Every hour he is away from his command is an hour of anxiety and uneasiness to him, devoted as he is to his brigade, and determined to share its fate, whatever it may be. Before leaving New-York, however, he intends to deliver an address in the Academy of Music, or some other large public edifice, for the benefit of the killed and wounded of the brigade."

The adjourned meeting of the Irish Brigade Committee met at the Astor House, yesterday evening, agreeable to notice. Andrew Carrigan, Esq., who was deputed to see Mr. Peter Cooper in relation to holding the public meeting in the Cooper Institute, reported that the hall of that building was undergoing repairs, and in consequence was not obtainable. Irving Hall was in a similar predicament. Mr. Carrigan also failed, on application, to get the armory of the Seventh Regiment, over Tompkins Market. Some were in favor of an open-air meeting, but as that would be attended with some disadvantages, the matter was, on motion, referred to Messrs. John Savage and Daniel Devlin.

THE FOURTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT REGIMENT.

This regiment now being organized under the auspices of Fourth Senatorial District Committee, offers great inducements to all those who wish to serve their country. Col. Peter McDermott is in command. Good able-bodied men who wish to enlist can apply at the headquarters, No. 446 Broadway.

THE ANTHON BATTALION OF LIGHT ARTILLERY.

Maj. F. W. Willard, commanding the Anthon Battalion of Light Artillery, is now recruiting men for this efficient arm of the service at No. 598 Broadway. This is the only artillery corps, now being raised under the last call of the President, in this State.

THE METROPOLITAN GUARD.

This regiment, commanded by Col. Turnbull, late Captain in the Metropolitan Police, and an officer in the Seventh Regiment, National Guard, is rapidly filling up. At present the headquarters are at the foot of Gouverneur-street—the men, however, already enlisted, will soon be transferred to Riker's Island, application having been made by Col. Turnbull for the privilege of having an encampment there. More men join this organization than any other, consequently the Metropolitan Guard will, if such a state of things be continued, be the first in the field.

THE NEW-YORK VOLUNTEER ARTILLERY, FIFTH REGIMENT.

The battalion of artillery attached to the Fifth Regiment, Col. Graham, now stationed at Fort Marshall, Baltimore, is in want of a few more men to complete the full complement. Lieuts. Calvin Shafer and Orville Harris are now recruiting at No. 40 Bowery.

THE FIRST REGIMENT NATIONAL VOLUNTEERS.

Col. Gurney's Regiment, now encamped at Camp Washington, Staten Island, is gradually filling up to the full standard. Clothing, rations and quarters are furnished immediately on being enrolled. Headquarters at Mozart Hall, Broadway.

There was a great crowd at the Rotunda yesterday morning of eager applicants for the bounty. The large proportion of it appeared to be women of Irish or German extraction, the former predominating. They kept the clerks busy from the opening of the doors until well on in the afternoon, pouring in at one door and out at another, in a steady stream, for hours. Everything passed off pleasantly, few mistakes occurring, and the women, almost without exception, behaving with becoming modesty, patience and good temper.

THE CITY FAMILY AID FUND.

PAYMENTS TO THE FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS.

The bestowal of relief to the families of volunteers, out of the appropriation made by the Common Council for that purpose, was resumed yesterday. This source of bounty is known as "The Family Aid Fund, No. 3;" two previous appropriations for the same purpose having been already expended. The Legislature have not given their sanction to the raising and distribution of this third appropriation; but there is little doubt that, when it again meets, the action of the Common Council in the matter will be sustained.

The principal change that has been made in the mode of distributing relief is that from fortnightly to weekly payments,—a change which will be a great convenience to the poor people whom it is intended to benefit. Extra precautions have also been taken to provide against fraud, and various improvements in the details of management have been effected. Amongst other regulations of the ordinance by which the appropriation is given is one requiring a domiciliary visitation of all applicants for assistance, so as to prevent any deception being practiced as to the number of children entitled to claim allowances. This ordinance, too, only provides for wives, and children and mothers whose sons supported them before going to the war, and prohibits giving aid to families not in actual need. New certificates are needed, by all who wish to participate in the bounty thus provided, signed by the commandants of the regiments to which the soldiers belong, and due notification must be made of removal of residence or other alteration of circumstances. The weekly allowance for each head of a family is fixed at $1 50, with 50 cents additional for each child—not exceeding a total of three, and under fourteen years of age.

From 9 A. M. till 4 P. M. paymasters are at their offices to honor the demands of ticket-holders; the several offices being situated as follows: In the Fourth Senatorial District, the Rotunda in the Park; Fifth Senatorial District, corner of Seventh-street and Hall Place, back of Tompkins market; Sixth Senatorial District, corner of Twenty-third-street and Broadway; Seventh Senatorial District, State Arsenal, corner of Seventh-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street.

MILITARY MATTERS IN BROOKLYN.

Gov. Morgan has appointed the following Committee to take charge of recruiting for the new levy in the Second Senatorial District:

Hon. Jesse. C. Smith.	Gen. H. B. Duryee.
Hon. Samuel S. Powell.	Adam Schapper, Esq.
John H. Funk, Esq.	Wm. M. Thomas, Esq.
Hon. Roswell C. Brainard.	Jas. P. Wallace, Esq.
George H. Fisher, Esq.	Saml. H. Roberts, Esq.
Richard H. Huntley, Esq.	Philip H. Grogan, Esq.
Edmund Driggs, Esq.	Jacob Wortman, Esq.
Demas Strong, Esq.	Stephen Crowell, Esq.

This Committee met at the City Hall Monday night, and organized by electing Hon. Jerr. C. Smith Chairman, and George H. Foster Secretary. Colonels being most needed at this juncture of affairs, the selection of a person to be recommended to the Governor as a suitable candidate to fill such a position, and to command the First Regiment, when raised in this Senatorial District, was of course the first business in order. After a somewhat lengthy consultation, the Committee agreed to recommend Capt. Anthony Conk. Capt. Conk was formerly Adjutant of the Fourteenth Regiment, and resigned after it volunteered for the war.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That in the organization of the First Regiment for the Second Senatorial District, the Committee appointed by His Excellency the Governor to superintend the same, will, in their nominations for officers, have regard solely to actual merit, military science and capacity.

Resolved, That this Committee hereby publicly invite applications for the command of companies, from all who may feel themselves qualified therefor, and who are prepared to pass the necessary examination.

Resolved, That this Committee will endeauor to secure to soldiers enlisting in such regiment all the advantages of bounty offered by the General Government or State of New-York, or of any relief which may be hereafter furnished to the families of soldiers.

Resolved, That the hearty coöperation of our fellow-citizens be and hereby is solicited in the organization of this regiment.

Mr. Strong urged upon the Committee the importance of securing to the families of soldiers regular monthly payments. For this purpose the City, or some Committee of responsible citizens, he said, should accept of allotment tickets from such volunteers as may desire it, and pay the amount regularly to their families on the first of every month, and it is supposed that at the next meeting some definite action will be taken. There is constantly increasing hostility toward the plan Gov. Morgan has adopted for raising troops in the Senatorial Districts, and particularly in respect to the Committees having the power to recommend officers—which, in fact, is equivalent to an appointment. If these committees will take upon themselves the responsible duty of providing for families, and, like men, have no voice in selecting these officers, there is no limit to the number of soldiers that can be obtained. But, as matters stand at present, recruiting is a dead letter in this city. Aside from the men picked up by the police, not four recruits a week have been obtained from among the residents of this city under the last call. The inhuman manner in which the families of soldiers already at the war are in many instances treated, has put a quietus upon obtaining recruits in this city. The men now in the service, who have families here, were promised as an inducement for them to enlist and fight the battles of all, that their families should be taken care of. This has not generally been done, and much suffering has been the result. The authorities, instead of carrying out the promises made, have appointed a Committee whose greatest aim seems to be to devise some scheme whereby to get rid of paying as many soldiers' wives as possible. The rules by which the Committee are governed in their payments, are a disgrace to the City. The daily scenes at the office of the Relief Commissioners, at the office of the Superintendents of the Poor, and at the Mayor's Office, are painful in the extreme. The suffering woman is not alone among the same unfortunate class, but the wives of good husbands, who were earning from $1 75 to $2 per day in many instances when they took up arms, have to beg for the small pittance that is allowed; and too frequently is there some excuse made for not paying this, and in despair the unfortunate woman appeals to the Mayor for redress, who has, we are told, paid hundreds of dollars out of his private purse to relieve cases of actual want. Only a few days since a woman having several children, whose husband has been in the army for fifteen months, applied for the first time to the Relief Commission for assistance she was fairly entitled to. She was refused. Her needs were pressing, and she applied to the office of the Superintendent of the Poor, where one of the minor officials in waiting shoved her out. She then asked the interference of the Mayor in her behalf. That official made an ineffectual effort to obtain what she required, and deeming the case a peculiarly hard one, he relieved her immediate wants himself. This woman had not applied for relief before because she had a little money in the bank when her husband left home, and with this and his pay as a soldier, for fifteen months she has managed to to get along without calling upon the Committee. This is but one case of many. Hundreds of women have written to their husbands in the army similar facts. These men come home the first opportunity, and no threats can make them return to duty again. If the truth could be known, it is believed that injustice to the families has done more to deplete the army of James River than rebel bullets. Let the Senatorial Committee take upon itself to remedy this evil and they will have no difficulty in filling up the quota of troops required from the several Senatorial Districts.

PROCLAMATION OF THE GOVERNOR OF INDIANA.

To the People of Indiana:

The large number of troops required to garrison and hold the great extent of territory which has been wrested from the possession of the rebels by the many and distinguished victories that have attended the Union arms, enables the rebels greatly to outnumber our forces now in the vicinity of Richmond. The greater part of the rebel army has been concentrated at Richmond, their last stronghold, for a final and desperate struggle, and the army of the Union, while fighting with a gallantry hardly equaled and never surpassed in the annals of warfare, has, by overwhelming numbers, been compelled to a short and temporary retreat.

The President, in the exercise of the powers vested in him by the Constitution and Laws of the United States, has called for 300,000 men, a force deemed entirely adequate to the crushing out of the rebellion and the restoration of peace, and the Union of the States.

Again I call upon the loyal and patriotic men of Indiana to come forward and supply the quota due from our State. Up to this hour Indiana occupies a most exalted position connected with the war. Her troops have been in almost every battle, and have behaved with uniform and distinguished gallantry. Never before has the State held so proud a place in the opinion of the world, and it should be the prayer and effort of every loyal citizen that she may not now falter, and that nothing may hereafter occur to detract from her well-earned honors. But while we are justly proud of the high rank to which Indiana has attained, we should never forget that our allegiance and highest duty are due to the nation, of which Indiana is but a part. That in struggling for our National Government, we are contending for our National existence, honor, and all that is dear to freemen, and that in this struggle we must succeed at whatever cost. That it is the duty of every State to furnish promptly her full proportion of the military force called for by the President, and that in doing so she has no right to dictate the terms of his military policy, or prescribe conditions precedent upon which such force shall be furnished. To do so would be to recognize the odious doctrine of State Rights, as it has been taught by rebel politicians for many years, and which is but another name for secession and the cause of all our woe.

I therefore call upon every man, whatever may be his rank and condition in life, to put aside his business and come to the rescue of his country. Upon every man, individually, let me urge the solemn truth, that whatever may be his condition or business, he has no business or duty half so important to himself and family as the speedy and effectual suppression of the rebellion.

Those who from age and infirmity cannot enter the army, can yet do much to stimulate others; and I want every man to feel especially called upon to exert himself, and by public and private exhortation, and by every legitimate influence, to encourage the immediate filling up of the new regiments. And to the Women of Indiana, whose hearts are so full of love of country, and who, by their labors and contributions, have done so much to relieve the sick and wounded soldiers, let me specially appeal. Emulate the virtues of the Roman matron; urge your sons, husbands and brothers to the field. Your influence is all-pervading and powerful. And to the maiden let me say, beware of that lover who, full of health and vigor, lingers at home in inglorious ease, when his country calls him to arms.

The Twelfth and Sixteenth Indiana Regiments will rendezvous at Indianapolis, as before provided.

At present one regiment will be called for from each Congressional District, to be numbered and located as follows:

Con. District.	Regiment.	Where Located.
First	Sixty-fifth	Evansville.
Second	Sixty-sixth	New-Albany.
Third	Sixty-Seventh	Madison.
Fourth	Sixty-Eighth	Greensburgh.

Six batteries are called for, to consist of 156 men each, to be rendezvoused at Indianapolis, or in the camps in the districts in which they may be raised, respectively, as may be desired.

Tents, uniforms, arms, artillery and equipments of every kind will be furnished at the various camps as fast as required. Commanders of the camps will be promptly appointed, and every facility afforded for recruiting, and providing for the troops.

The period of enlistment will be for "three years or during the war," and the terms and mode of organization will be pointed out in an order to be issued in a day or two by the Adjutant-General.

Beecher, of Chemung County. A strong determination to prosecute the war and sustain the Government was manifested, and over forty volunteers came forward and enrolled their names. This vicinity will promptly furnish its full quota under the late call for volunteers.

WAR MEETING AT DETROIT.

Detroit, Tuesday, July 22.

There was an immense meeting this afternoon on the Campus Martius in aid of enlistments under the recent call for troops. Stores and factories were generally closed throughout the city. Resolutions were passed requesting the City Council to pay a bounty of $50 to each unmarried man, and $100 to each married man enlisting in the regiment to be raised in this city. Liberal private donations, in addition, were offered, and the greatest unanimity prevailed.

THE BATTLE OF SEVEN PINES.

The Official Report of Gen. Casey.

Headquarters Gen. Casey's Division,
Poplar Hill, Henrico Co., Va., June, 1862.

Captain: In obedience to directions from the General commanding the Fourth Corps, I have the honor to submit the following report of the operations of my division in the battle of the Seven Pines, on the 31st ult. I occupied with my division the advanced position of the army, about three-fourths of a mile from the cross-roads at the Seven Pines, where I caused rifle-pits and a redoubt to be thrown up. Also an abattis to be commenced about one-third of a mile in front of the pits, and parties were employed upon these works on the morning of the 31st.

Previously to occupying my last position I had occupied the crossroads, and had there also caused an abattis to be cut and earthworks to be commenced. On the 29th, the day on which I moved my camp forward, and also on the 30th, my advanced pickets had been attacked by a body of the enemy on the former day by a force of three hundred and on the next by one of four hundred in number. The pickets on the first day succeeded in driving the enemy back in confusion, killing and wounding a number, with a loss on my part of but two killed and two wounded. Maj. Kelly, of the Ninety-sixth Regiment New-York Volunteers, was one of my killed. The Major was in command of my pickets at this point, and by his gallant conduct animated the men to the firm resistance offered. In the attack of the 30th I ordered the One Hundredth Regiment, New-York Volunteers, to move to the support of the pickets. With the assistance of this regiment, under the command of Col. Brown, they succeeded in repelling the attack, the enemy leaving six of his dead upon the ground. On the morning of the 31st May, my pickets toward the right of my line succeeded in capturing Lieut. Washington, an Aid of Gen. Johnson, of the rebel service. This circumstance, in connection with the fact that Col. Hunt, my General Officer of the day, had reported to me that his outer pickets had heard cars running nearly all night on the Richmond end of the railroad, led me to exercise increased vigilance. Between 11 and 12 o'clock, a mounted vidette was sent in from the advanced pickets, to report that a body of the enemy was in sight, approaching on the Richmond Road. I immediately ordered the One Hundred and Third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers to advance to the front for the purpose of supporting the pickets. It was soon afterward reported to me by a mounted vidette that the enemy were advancing in force; and about the same time two shells were thrown over my camp. I was led to believe that a serious attack was contemplated, and immediately ordered the Division under arms, the men at work on the abattis and rifle pits to be recalled and to join their regiments, the artillery to be harnessed up at once, and made my disposition to repel the enemy. While these were in progress the pickets commenced firing. I directed Spratt's Battery of four pieces, three inch rifle guns, to advance in front of the rifle pits, about one fourth of a mile, in order to reply with advantage to the enemy's artillery, which I knew was in battery in front of my pickets' line, and also to shell the enemy as soon as the withdrawal of the pickets and their supports should permit. I supported this battery by the One Hundred and Fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, the Eleventh Regiment Maine Volunteers and the One Hundredth Regiment N. Y. Volunteers, of the First Brigade, and the Ninety-second Regiment N. Y. Volunteers of the Third Brigade.

I placed Capt. Bate's Battery, commanded by Lieut. Hart, in the redoubt, Capt. Regan's Battery in rear and on the right of the rifle-pits; Capt. Fitch's Battery in rear of the redoubt. The Eighty-fifth Regiment New-York Volunteers occupied the rifle-pits on the left, and the Eighty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers those on the right. The One Hundred and First Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers were posted on the right of these regiments, and the Eighty-first, Ninety-sixth and Ninety-eighth New-York regiments were advanced to cover the left flank. For several days the Fifty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers had occupied a position on the Nine Mile road, a support to my advanced pickets on my right flank, and the Fifty-sixth Regiment New-York Volunteers had held a position on the railroad. I made no change in the position of these last two regiments. About fifteen minutes after these dispositions had been completed, I directed the advanced battery to open on the artillery and advancing column of the enemy. In a short time after, the One Hundred and Third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, which at the first alarm had been ordered to the support of the pickets, came down the road in some confusion, having suffered considerable loss from the fire of the rebel advance. The enemy now attacked me in large force on the centre and both wings, and a brisk fire of musketry extended along the two opposing lines; my artillery in the meantime throwing canister into their ranks with great effect. Perceiving, at length, that the enemy were threatening me upon both wings, for want of reinforcements, which had been repeatedly asked for, and that his column still pressed on, I then, in order to save my artillery, ordered a charge of bayonets by the four supporting regiments of the centre, which was executed in a most gallant and successful manner, under the immediate direction of Brig.-Gen. Naglee, commanding First Brigade, the enemy being driven back.

When the charge had ceased, but not until the troops had reached the edge of the woods, the most terrible fire of musketry commenced that I have ever witnessed. The enemy again advanced in force, and the danks having [illegible] Greatwood, a retreat to the [illegible] necessary. To be brief, the rifle-pits were retained until they were almost enveloped by the enemy—the troops, with some exceptions, fighting with spirit and gallantry. The troops then retreated to the second line, in possession of Gen. Couch's Division. Two pieces of artillery were placed in the road between the two lines, which did good execution upon the advancing foe.

On my arrival at the second line, I succeeded in rallying a portion of my division, and, with the assistance of Gen. Kearney, who had just arrived at the head of one of the brigades of his division, attempted to regain possession of my works, but it was found impracticable. The troops of Gen. Couch's Division were driven back, although reinforced by the corps of Gen. Heintzelman. The corps of Gen. Keyes and Heintzelman, having retreated to the third line, by direction of Gen. Heintzelman, I then collected together what remained of my division.

The Fifty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers, and the Fifty-sixth Regiment New-York Volunteers were under the particular direction of Brig.-Gen. Naglee, and I refer to his report for further mention of them. Gen. Naglee behaved with distinguished gallantry through the engagement, having a horse killed under him, and receiving four contusal wounds from musket balls. Gens. Palmer and Wessells, encouraged by their example their men to do their duty on the field. Gen. Wessells had a horse shot under him, and himself received a wound in the shoulder. Lieuts. West and Foster, my Aides-de-Camp, were active through the day, affording me much service and behaving gallantly. Capt. Davis, of the Provost Guard of my Division, acted as my aide a portion of the time, rendering much assistance, and conducting himself in a gallant manner. I also feel much indebtedness to my Medical Director, Dr. Crosby, for the energy he evinced in collecting, and his promptness and skill in providing for the wounded.

I have inclosed a list of the killed, wounded and missing, as also the reports of the commanders of the brigades to which I refer. I cannot forbear mention of the severe misfortune suffered by the division and the service in the loss of Col. G. D. Bailey, my Chief of Artillery, who fell in the attempt to spike the pieces in my redoubt, which were necessarily abandoned. Col. Bailey was an officer of thorough military education, of clear and accurate mind, cool, determined and intrepid in the discharge of his duty, and promising, with riper years, to honor still more the profession to which he was devoted.

About the same time also fell Major Van Valkenburg, of the First Regiment New-York Artillery, a brave, and discreet, and energetic officer. Under the circumstances, I think it my duty to add a few remarks with regard to my division. On leaving Washington, eight of the regiments were composed of raw troops. It has been the misfortune of the division, marching through the Peninsula, to be subjected to an ordeal which would have severely tried veteran troops. Furnished with scanty transportation, occupying sickly positions, exposed to the inclemency of the weather, at times without tents or blankets; ill supplied with rations and medical stores, the loss from sickness has been great, especially with the officers. Yet a party from my division took possession of the railroad bridge across the Chickahominy, driving the enemy from it, and my division took the advance on the 23d day of May, and, by an energetic reconnoissance, drove the enemy beyond the Seven Pines. Notwithstanding all these drawbacks, and the fact that there were not five thousand men in line of battle, they withstood for three hours the attack of an overwhelming force of the enemy without the reintorcement of a single man at my first line. The Fifty-fifth Regiment N. Y. V. reached my second line just before it was evacuated. If a portion of my division did not behave as well as could have been wished, it must be remembered to what a terrible ordeal they were subjected, still those that behaved discreditably were exceptional cases. It is true that the division, after being nearly surrounded by the enemy and losing one-third of the number actually engaged, retreated to the second line; they would all have been prisoners of war had they delayed their retreat a few minutes longer.

In my humble opinion, from what I witnessed on the 31st, I am convinced that the stubborn and desperate resistance of my division saved the army on the right bank of the Chickahominy from a severe repulse, which might have resulted in a disastrous defeat.

The blood of the gallant dead would cry to me from the ground on which they fell fighting for their country, had I not said what I have to vindicate them from the unmerited aspersions which have been cast upon them.

SILAS CASEY,
Brigadier-General Commanding.
